Following announcement of resignation

City manager reflects on WCH situation

By GEORGE MALEK

Mixed emotions are left in the wake of the announced resignation of Dan Wolford who has served as city manager of Washington C. H. for the past five years.

Some residents feel a change in the administration was overdue; others are inclined to think the city manager has been a scapegoat for the faults of council in recent months. Wolford himself has mixed feelings about leaving his post.

While he is pleased with many aspects of his tenure in the city's top executive position, other goals have not yet been attained and some projects are left in various stages of completion. A personal desire for less controversial employment overshadows a desire to continue serving his home town and lifelong friends.

With just three weeks remaining before he leaves office, Wolford discussed the past five years, and pondered what the future might hold for Washington C. H.

As has been the case with almost every city, indeed with almost every citizen, for the past five years, Washington C.H. has operated on a very tight budget. Neither the city nor its residents have escaped the economic pinch which has plagued the nation.

The first official communication Wolford was presented when he accepted the post was a memo noting that the city was approximately $10,000 short of its projected expenses for 1970.

As the economic situation worsened over the ensuing years, the city's financial woes continued. Wolford, however, prefers to keep an eye on the bright side of the situation by noting that city services remained a strong point throughout the difficulties.

Traditionally, when cities have financial problems, city services suffer. Cleveland is in the midst of a financial crisis and is reducing the number of policemen and firemen while closing several fire stations.

"In spite of the problems here," Wolford said, "there has been no reduction in these vital services." He points with pride to the service departments. "Although none of the departments have as many men as the department heads would like, the personnel have been first-rate and have served the community extremely well," Wolford said.

Although happy to point out the quality of services, Wolford is reluctant to accept any of the credit.

"The individuals heading the various departments have been responsible and deserve the credit," the city manager explained.

"Our police department is one of the best law-enforcement agencies in the state. It has maintained a degree of professionalism which is almost unheard of in a community this size," he added.

Recent assistance from the federal government has financed the renovation of the jail facilities, and much of the work was done by the officers themselves.

"Although the fire department has been short-handed as far back as anyone can remember, the department has done a fine job," Wolford said. "There has been a move to include more educational programs for presentation to schools and organizations as well as service groups," he noted.

With some additional employees provided through the Community Action Commission and the federal Comprehensive Employment Training Act, the street department has maintained present streets, initiated an annual clean-up program along Paint Creek, and scoured the streets with a cleaner on a regular basis. Streets have been quickly cleared after even the worst of winter storms.

Action approved by 5-2 vote

City Council accepts Wolford resignation

By MIKE FLYNN

Record-Herald Editor

Washington C.H. City Council Wednesday night accepted "with regret" the resignation of City Manager Dan Wolford.

The resignation of Wolford was accepted by City Council members in a 5-2 vote during a special 15-minute meeting held in the City Office Building.

CITY COUNCIL chairman Ralph Cook and Councilman Eddie Fisher cast the opposing votes.

The special meeting held Wednesday night became necessary after City Council did not vote whether or not to accept Wolford's resignation at the regular June 11 session.

Wolford, 141 Carolyn Road, who had served as Washington C.H.'s city manager for nearly five years, resigned because of "personal reasons."

The 27-year-old Wolford said he is presently exploring a number of private business opportunities and does not plan to re-enter municipal government in any capacity.

A 1970 graduate of Wilmington College, Wolford became perhaps the nation's youngest city manager when he was appointed to the post at 22 to fill the vacancy created by the death of Clarence A. Christman.

Cook said he is presently accepting applications for the city manager's post. He said interviews by City Council will be arranged after applications have been received.

City Council members agreed to place advertisements in a number of different trade magazines in hopes of attracting applicants.

Wolford's resignation is scheduled to become effective on July 11.

Council member John E. Rhoads suggested that the city's legislators establish a consultant's fee to be paid to Wolford if he should be asked to assist in city government operations following the July 11 date.

Cook said legislation on the consultant's fee will be considered at City Council's next regular meeting on June 25.

Wolford had indicated in his letter of resignation to City Council members that he would be "willing to assist city council and the new city manager in their future endeavors as a special consultant."

One problem presently lurking over City Council members is the fact that the city's 1976 budget proposal has not yet been prepared. The budget, by law, must be submitted by July 15.

City Council members have two more regular meetings scheduled before the July 15 deadline.

IN OTHER matters Wednesday night, the city manager was authorized to purchase 1975 income tax forms to be mailed to individual taxpayers and businesses and industries in Washington C.H.

Council members agreed to purchase more than 12,000 forms plus other miscellaneous paperwork from Moore Adcrafters, CCC Highway-W, at a cost of $1,390.

It was pointed out that Moore Adcrafters submitted a bid for printing the forms which was 40 per cent less than the other firms bidding on the job.

The forms will be mailed at a cost of approximately 6.3 cents per copy.

IF SUFFICIENT interest is shown, men's, women's and mixed shuffleboard and volleyball leagues will be initiated by Community Education as part of the summer recreation program.

The leagues will be scheduled on Tuesday evenings from between 6 and 9 p.m., and no entry fee will be charged.

Those individuals who are interested in shuffleboard or persons representing teams of six or more for volleyball should contact program director Hank Shaffer at 335-6621. . . . Although individuals will be placed on volleyball teams if possible, Shaffer hopes that those who are interested will try to arrange teams before calling.

League play will begin July 1 if enough teams respond.

FOR THOSE readers who were bewildered by the flower picture on the front page of Monday's Record-Herald, Mrs. George Hott of New Holland called in and explained they were called "Alium" flowers.

According to Mrs. Hott, who has some of the flowers in her own yard, they come in white, lavender and pink. . . . The ones pictured in the paper were grown by Frank Reichelderfer, 119 S. North St.

QUITE A CANDLE — This Landmark grain elevator, loaded with ground corn cobs, caught fire in the Industrial Park by a spark from a welder's torch at 12:15 p.m. Wednesday. Washington C.H. firemen rushed to the scene to pump water and foam into the elevator and at the same time guard against a dust-pocket explosion. All the corn-cob material had to be removed from the elevator to assure the fire would not start up again and firemen were on the scene until 4 p.m. doing just that.

But, a lot of work!

Landmark plant blaze causes little damage

Wednesday's fire at the Landmark feed plant in the city's industrial park resulted in very little property damage, but a considerable amount of work on the part of both Washington C. H. firemen and Landmark employees.

Welders were installing equipment above one of the plant's towering storage bins when sparks fell into the ground corn cobs stored below. The cobs began smoldering and the Washington C. H. Fire Department was called shortly after noon.

Although only a few pounds of the corn cobs were actually charred, the entire bin had to be emptied to be sure no pockets of coals remained buried within the bin.

Firemen who had doused the surface of the cobs with foam and water remained on the scene for nearly five hours while the bin was emptied through the use of a conveyor.

Landmark employees removed a covering from the auger which carries the cobs from the bin and inspected and separated the material as it was transferred to additional storage bins and hopper railroad cars. More than 63 tons of cobs were in the silo which was nearly full at the time of the mishap.

With only a few bushels of cobs destroyed and no water damage, J. C. Wright, plant manager, estimated the loss at $100. Most of that figure was from labor costs incurred.

Five firemen and one truck were on the scene until 5 p.m. A second truck was returned to the station about 2 p.m.

House-okayed budget sent to Gov. Rhodes

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Democratic legislative leaders are expecting some line item vetoes by GOP Gov. James A. Rhodes in the newly approved, $10.6 billion state budget bill.

But House Speaker Vernal G. Riffe Jr., D-89 New Boston, said after the House concurred Wednesday in the Senate version that he doesn't believe they will be extensive.

Virtually along partly lines, the House decided 55-39 to approve Senate changes and send the two-year spending bill on to Rhodes, rather than send it to a joint conference committee, the normal procedure.

The vote came on a busy legislative day that included major actions on other fronts. In those other developments:

—Senators approved 29-3 and sent the House a bill prohibiting state and local government agencies in Ohio from conducting business in private. A key exclusion would be party caucuses which would remain fair game for politicians.

—The House reconsidered and adopted 84-3 a proposed constitutional amendment permitting the state or its municipalities to subsidize railroads created by the federal government. The proposal is designed to permit Ohio to get in on a federally-concocted scheme to reorganize Penn Central and other bankrupt carriers into a system known as ConRail.

—Majority Democrats sprung from the political confines of the Senate Rules Committee the name of J. Gordon Peltier and 13 other Rhodes' appointees still awaiting confirmation by the upper chamber. Peltier, commerce director, and the others are to be voted on today.

Riffe, asked about his reaction to possible vetoes by Rhodes in the budget bill, said he doesn't think the Republican governor will veto "dollar amounts" in the document. But he would not be surprised if Rhodes rejects "some of the language."

He noted that Rhodes' budget director, Howard Collier, told senators late last week that the Senate version had overcome some major GOP objections, and that the changes will improve the state's cash flow over the next two years.

Riffe didn't pinpoint sections of the bill, but he obviously referred in part to language that mandated certain spending by state agencies and greatly increased the powers of the state Controlling Board—under Democratic control—and another section that required major corporations to pay their franchise taxes in advance based on estimated profits.

Rep. George Tablack, D-52 Campbell, cast the only Democratic vote against concurrence. He discounted claims the bill only required tax payments by corporations already required of self-employed Ohioans, maintaining the language is unconstitutional.

Chan Cochran, Rhodes' administrative assistant, indicated it would be several days at least before the governor has any comments about the bill. Rhodes can veto it all, or by sections.

He said it was being studied by Collier and his staff and that Rhodes will await a report and recommendations from them. Rhodes has 10 days to act on the measure, exclusive on Sundays and holidays, after he formally receives it from the legislature.

Democrats, with a 21-12 margin in the Senate, could override vetoes in that chamber. In the House, however, their number is 50—one short of the three-fifths required.

House concurrence came after about two hours of debate, much of it involving whether the bill is balanced. Democrats said $94 million in cuts by the Senate, based on later revenue estimates, brought it into balance without requiring new or additional taxes.

Rep. Frederick N. Young, R-38 Dayton, ranking GOP member of the House Finance Committee, said Democrats ignored more realistic revenue estimates from the administration. He predicted the document is out of whack by as much as $120 million.

Young reiterated earlier warnings by Senate Republicans that the bill, if approved intact, would mean "massive layoffs" of state employees and require "painstaking, severe cuts in state services. The rush to concurrence will come back to haunt us all."

The highway department has always been a hotbed of political favoritism, and with the recent shift of politics in the statehouse came a change in the top positions at the garage on CCC Highway-W.

Fitzpatrick has been transferred to the construction division of the Ohio Department of Transportation and is stationed in Columbus where a great deal of work on Interstate 71 is currently underway.

Fitzpatrick's assistant superintendent, William Pollard, of Jeffersonville, is stationed at the rest area on Interstate 71.

Ford, Wallace edge close to announcing candidacy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford is edging closer to formal candidacy for a full presidential term by creating a 1976 campaign organization and naming a Georgia Republican to head it.

At the same time, Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace said Wednesday that he intends "to be involved" in the 1976 election campaign and indicated he will announce his candidacy later this year.

Ford plans to file papers by Friday with the Federal Election Commission, formally creating the organization to raise funds and plan his campaign, the White House announced Wednesday.

The announcement by White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said that Secretary of the Army Howard H. (Bo) Callaway, a one-time Georgia congressman who headed Richard M. Nixon's 1968 campaign in the South, will become chairman of the committee within two or three weeks.

Ford's formal declaration of candidacy will come "sometime within the next few weeks," before television cameras, Nessen said.

Meanwhile, Wallace told cheering businessmen of his plans and said: "I believe that the great issue of the survival of the middle class is going to need someone to forcefully express that viewpoint to the point of getting these people into the political process so that we are going to see that these changes are brought about."

The Alabama governor said he reserved the right to change his mind but indicated he has every intention of making his fourth presidential bid in 1976, championing the nation's lower and middle-income taxpayers and assailing "the elitist intelligentsia" and big government.

Wallace, who never disbanded his campaign organization after a 1972 assassination attempt ended his last presidential bid, has collected more than $2 million already to finance a new presidential drive.

Ford, however, only began to focus on the presidential race last month after a group of longtime friends and supporters headed by former Republican National Chairman Dean Burch recommended that a formal campaign structure be created.

The Republican Committee, which picked up Ford's earlier political expenses such as public opinion polls for the White House, will only pay for activities undertaken by Ford as his party's titular leader. The campaign group will pay for his expenses when he travels as a candidate, Nessen said.

House clears rail-saving amendment on second try

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A proposed constitutional amendment aimed at saving hundreds of miles of Ohio railroad track now marked for abandonment cleared the House easily on its second attempt Wednesday.

The amendment would allow the state or municipalities to subsidize operations of railroad companies created by Congress, notably the fledgling Consolidated Rail Corp., or ConRail.

The bill passed 84-3, a dramatic reversal of the April 30 vote in which it was defeated 52-36 through party-line Republican opposition.

Republicans redrafted the measure, however, and pledged their support. Debate on the resolution Wednesday amounted mainly to members of the two parties complimenting each other on their cooperation.

The resolution stems from the reorganization of the Penn Central and other bankrupt rail lines in the northeast and Midwest. Congress plans to reorganize the lines into a private, profitmaking corporation — ConRail.

But to make a profit, planners have proposed cutting off all freight lines which don't earn their keep.

Having joined the Ohio Department of Transportation in 1963, Ellis served as assistant superintendent to Gene McLean at the local garage for eight years during the previous administration of Ohio Gov. James A. Rhodes. He has been operating his 140-acre farm for the past four years. He raises soybeans, wheat and cattle.

His assistant superintendent is Paul Cottrill, who lives on Lampe Road just outside Jeffersonville. An employee with the department for 18 years, Cottrill has served as labor foreman for the past 16 years. Cottrill worked at the Washington C.H. garage until the Jeffersonville shop opened in 1960 and has been stationed there since that time.

He and his wife Dorothy have two sons and a daughter. Kathy is enrolled at Ohio State University, James is single and working in Alliance while Larry is married and lives on the Post Road. Cottrill, too, has a farm to which he devotes some of his time.

Fitzpatrick, a Milledgeville resident, was appointed superintendent just three months after former Ohio Gov. John J. Gilligan took office in 1971. He succeeded McLean, who served in that capacity throughout the Rhodes administration. Fitzpatrick had been a member of the Democratic Central Committee for 18 years prior to his appointment as chief of the highway garage.

City manager reflects

in each of these areas of city service," Wolford continued. It is the responsibility of the city manager to maintain a good working relationship with the department heads, utilize their knowledge of their own department, and offer suggestions to the council based on their recommendations and the manager's knowledge of the city's financial situation.

Perhaps the most striking facet of recent Washington C.H. history has been the community's ability to weather the national economic situation. The reasons are varied, and Wolford explained some of the most important causes.

A major contributor to economic stability of the community is its location. Fayette County is prime farm land which is served by a network of major highways. It has a central location between Columbus and Cincinnati, as well as between Chillicothe and Dayton.

Surrounding Washington C.H. are several communities of similar size and a number of smaller villages. This offers an excellent potential for retail sales as well as wholesale manufacturing and industrial expansion.

As a result, Washington C.H. has seen a wealth of construction in recent years despite the fact that the construction companies throughout the nation have suffered from mass inactivity.

Discount stores, restaurants, manufacturers and industries have all recently located in Washington C.H. With them they have brought more jobs, attracted consumers from other areas, and a stream of money into this area.

Wolford credits this diversity of business with helping Washington C.H. fare relatively well through these difficult times. Although a particular aspect of the business community might suffer at any one time, the other companies have been able to maintain their work force and provide retailers with a limited but steady flow of consumers.

"We saw the danger of having too many eggs in one basket when National Cash Register closed its doors," Wolford pointed out. When this one industry encountered economic difficulty and closed its plant, the city was thrown into its own economic nosedive. Unemployment was very high and the loss of revenue to the community was tremendous.

The one saving grace at that time, was the atmosphere of the community itself. The attraction of the city and its people kept many of NCR's employees here even though they drove many miles to new jobs in Columbus or Dayton.

Although their employment moved miles away, their paychecks stayed largely in Washington C.H., providing income for retailers and their employees.

"The situation is much healthier now," Wolford continued. "No one industry so dominates the economic picture of the city," he said.

"Growth is not desirable for its own sake," Wolford continued, "but the diversity of growth experienced here should prove very beneficial." He also noted that residents are not likely to be crowded out by the recent influx. While business has grown and become more diverse, the population has not skyrocketed. Only a mild increase in population has accompanied the incoming industry, and most of the employees have been longtime residents.

Much of the credit for this increased diversity should go to community leaders in many fields, Wolford said. The Community Improvement Corporation and the Washington C.H. Area Chamber of Commerce played a major role.

"They made their interest in new business known, assisted those who considered locating in Washington C.H. as much as possible, and tried to cooperate in any way they could," he said. "The attitude of a community's leadership is a determining factor in many cases — very few firms locate in an area where they are not encouraged to do so," he concluded.

In addition to the diversity to the economic base in Washington C.H. and Fayette County, federal funds have assisted local residents, and the city manager has played a major role in obtaining them.

"I am very opposed to the increase in federal programs," Wolford said. "It is silly to have local residents send tax money to Washington so that the bureaucracy can pass it back to us." The city manager said he believed such activity should be limited, but that it is not the job of local government to do so. Voters must impress upon their representatives to Congress that they want such inefficiency stopped, he said. Until they do so, the aim of every local government should be to see that its constituents get their fair share of the funds.

If there has been one area in which the city manager has been most productive, it would seem to be his handling of applications for federal assistance. In the past two years, federal grants have employed more than 50 persons, paid for the remodeling of the city jail facilities, renovated the Municipal Court, purchased radio units for the police department and a wealth of communication equipment within police headquarters itself.

Millions more will be used to install the new sanitary sewer system which is scheduled to get underway later this year.

"PAYING AS YOU GO," Wolford believes is an important part of a local government's strength. Having the money available to carryout minor improvements when they first come to light is essential to saving the taxpayers money, he said.

He cites the city's waste water treatment plant as a prime example. If a smaller amount of money had been available over the past several years, improvement of the system could have taken place on a regular basis. Had this been the case, the treatment plant would not be in such dire need of repairs at the present time, and home-owners would not have been subjected to the side effects in the meantime, he added.

Another example which voters will undoubtedly face in the near future is the purchase of new firefighting equipment. There has been no excess for the regular replacement or a fund for the purchase of a fire truck. As a result, the firemen will be using outdated and inadequate tools until the situation becomes so deteriorated that a levy is passed for mass purchasing of equipment and a truck.

If the situation continues as it has in the past, this equipment will then begin to deteriorate at the same time and will all have to be replaced together at some time in the future.

Wolford favors a situation which is now mandated in federal projects. When the project is launched the voters are assessed at a rate which not only pays for the facility, but over the lifespan of the unit will accumulate enough funds for repair and replacement of the materials.

This type of base allows the voter to pay for the overall cost of a project over a long period of time rather than paying a very low tax for many years and then being hit with a large bill for neglected repairs all at one time.

THE FUTURE of anything is difficult to predict, and the city of Washington C.H. is no exception. However, perhaps no one is in a better position to foretell the future than the city manager who has been at the heart of city government for the past five years.

"The construction of new stores, restaurants, and industries is likely to tail off," he says. "The recent boom was prompted by the location of Washington C.H. in the midst of several outlying communities which have no extensive consumer appeal."

The shoppers in Washington C.H. come from Mount Sterling, Wilmington, Greenfield, Leesburg, Lynchburg, Sabina, and several other communities. With increasing gasoline cost, many persons who were traveling to Columbus to shop are now happy to come here. However, the city is reaching its full retail potential, and new construction is likely to slow down.

"That is not to say that construction will end," he pointed out. The city manager expects to see a good deal of remodeling of the stores which have been here for decades. "The competition of the new stores will undoubtedly prompt the remodeling of several older shops," he suggested.

The approaching sewer project will be bringing considerable sums of money into the city. "Some of the construction workers will be local people, and even those who are not will most likely spend a good part of their paychecks here," he said.

The population of Washington C.H. is likely to increase somewhat, but not nearly as dramatically as did its business and industry counterpart.

Without being overly dramatic, Wolford summarized his observations by projecting a quieter future for the city. With the building boom coming to an end, it appears that after a somewhat chaotic period during the installation of the sewer system, Washington C.H. should settle into a somewhat slower pace.

"However, the residents of Washington C.H. have the power to point their city in whatever direction they desire," he said.

"If they actively participate in the governmental process and utilize the strength inherent in their collective vote, they themselves will be able to decide what the future holds," Wolford noted.

Stock list continues to rise

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market edged upward today in a continuation of Wednesday's drifting, uncertain pattern.

The opening Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up a fraction, and gainers took a 4-3 lead over losers on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts said the market continued to be dominated by an atmosphere of cautious waiting for signs of the prospective speed and degree of the economic recovery that has been widely predicted.

The Dow's close has been between 815 and 850 every day for the past six weeks with investors biding their time.

Today's prices included General Telephone, down 1/4 at 24; Zerox, off 3/8 at 65; Sundstrand, off 1/4 at 23 1/2, and Penzoil, unchanged at 20 1/4.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average eased .78 at 827.83.

Declines outnumbered advances by about a 4-3 margin on the NYSE, and the exchange's composite index was down .10 at 48.17.

Big Board volume slowed to 15.59 million shares, the lightest total in more than 10 weeks.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose .37 to 89.47.

Nixon 'indirectly' ordered break-in WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House aide John D. Ehrlichman feels he had indirect authority from former President Richard M. Nixon to order the so-called Ellsberg break-in, Ehrlichman's attorney says.

The argument was made before a three-judge appeals court Wednesday as attorneys for Ehrlichman and three other men convicted of violating the civil rights of the California psychiatrist of Pentagon Papers figure Daniel Ellsberg attempted to have the convictions overturned.

Wounded Kent State student testifies

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP)—A Kent State University student wounded by Ohio National Guardsmen five years ago told jurors today of riding with a girl's body after a slug tore through his ankle.

Thomas Grace, 25, of Syracuse, N.Y., testified student antiwar demonstrators were advancing "parallel to the Guard" as the troops climbed the hill on which came the gunfire that gave rise to the current civil damages trial. He said he turned and ran at the first shot.

Wednesday, a veteran guardsman testified student demonstrators rushed toward the slop called Blanket Hill "on a dead run" moments before guardsmen fired on them.

The witness, 1st Sgt. Myron Pryor of Barberton, said the charging protesters were yelling, "Kill the pigs. We've got 'em on the run."

Grace, one of those suing Pryor and 42 others, said he didn't recall any barrage of debris being hurled at the guardsmen as they moved up the hill.

He testified he was about 160 feet down the hill from the guardsmen when he was struck. He said he saw his roommate, Alan Canfora, behind a tree 15 or 20 farther from the troops. Canfora, one of the nine wounded, also is one of those who brought the $46 million suit.

While on his stomach after being hit, Grace testified, he saw Jeffery Miller drop to the ground. Grace said that moments later he was carried within 10 feet of where Miller's body was lying in a pool of blood. Miller was one of the four killed.

Grace said he was removed from the campus in the same ambulance as was Sandra Scheuer of Youngstown, another of those who died.

Asked whether he heard any conversation in the ambulance, Grace replied, "No, I think she was dead."

Right turn on red light OK, if cities don't object

COUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Don't just stop and go. Better look for a sign, too, before making a right turn on red after July 1.

There may be a lot of them.

In Columbus, as an example, there may be a couple of hundred exceptions to the new state law that goes into effect on the first day of July.

The new law allows right turns at red lights after a stop to look around. But, it provides that city officials can overrule the go-ahead by posting signs prohibiting turns on red.

A spokesman for the Columbus Division of Traffic Engineering estimated that such signs will be placed at as many as one-third of the city's 713 intersections which currently have traffic lights.

That may be a bit higher than the anticipated average among Ohio's major cities, which at rough estimate will run around 25 per cent, a spokesman for the Department of Transportation said.

The state is trying to make up its mind about the 500 state highway intersections outside incorporated areas.

"We have about 200 signs made up, but we haven't sent out that many," said Robert McMillan of the DOT's Bureau of Traffic.

He figured about 25 per cent of state intersections might have restricting signs.

Major Ohio cities appear to be studying the state's approach to the problem before proceeding. "We aren't keeping any count on cities," said McMillan. "All I can tell you is that all the major cities have asked for state guidelines."

The City of Columbus expects to complete its intersection survey in time to post signs before July 1. Traffic engineers are investigating 50 intersections daily.

The traffic division has asked all Columbus schools for counts on the number of children who cross streets morning, noon and afternoon at intersections with lights.

That's one reason, city engineers said, why the division may prohibit some right turns on red. The driver may be turning into a crosswalk full of children.

The state also is in favor of restrictions in such cases.

City engineers cited other potential sign spots:

—Where the driver can't see well because of curves or visual obstructions.

—Where a right turn would conflict with oncoming traffic given a green arrow to turn left.

—Where an intersection has five or more approaches.

—Where right turns would be permitted from two or more lanes going in the same direction on the same street.

—Where right turns would send a car across the paths of vehicles given green go-aheads as in the case of an intersection with an additional lane coming in at an angle.

The prohibiting signs will have a newly developed plastic sheeting that reflects light at 250 candlepower.

Delco Moraine manager raps regulations

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — A manager of Delco Moraine Division of General Motors Corp. blames government controls for unemployment and millions of dollars of mothballed equipment at the plant here.

Delco General Manager R. W. Truxell said it is difficult to find a product saddled with more regulations than the automobile.

Truxell expressed his feelings recently to a congressional committee studying the automotive recession.

He cited several ways in which he contends the roadblocks take form:

—Costly required safety products of questionable benefit.

—Timetables that do not provide enough time to design, develop, test and produce the parts.

—Frequent governmental changes and delays in arriving at a decision.

Truxell said manufacturers, in attempts to meet deadlines, assume that requirements will become law although many are changed or cancelled after large sums of money have been spent.

Mothballed equipment is becoming commonplace, he said, and may never produce anything but red ink on a balance sheet.

Truxell said standards that most concern Delco Moraine deal with brakes, and most of them were initiated by industry.

But legislators, he said, made them more strict, many unreasonable.

Legislated products do not sell because people will not pay the price, he said.

Truxell cited as two expensive monuments to what he called misjudgment the $325 air bag and the seat belt interlock. He said much of the effort of product engineering of the past five years concentrated on developing components to satisfy federal dictates.

The regulations were changed in March, he said, and 70 per cent of the business Delco Moraine expected during the next three model years probably will never be realized. The changes were expected to add 179 jobs.

Truxell said most of his division's expenditures and manpower are going toward meeting environmental legislation and safety regulations, leaving little for improving productivity or developing products.

He said his division has spent $4 million for a waste treatment plant.

"Juke Joint Jump"

Elvin Bishop

Elvin Bishop's funky country blues provides scant entertainment and virtually no new musical ideas. Bishop works in the Deep South alongside Wet Willie, Grinderswitch and others, singing pretty much the same material in a dark, husky voice.

Bishop's tunes are orchestrated by guitars, piano, organ, harmonica and drums-typical fire-power. Song after song, with the exception of the title track and "Sure Feels Good," wallows in mediocrity and sameness.

The positive aspects of this record include the steady rhythmic pace of the music and the consistent, no-mistakes playing. Some sharp piano licks and snappy slide guitar riffs add a tingle of excitement here and there.

A restive mood is set by harmonic notes on piano in the opening bars of "Wide River," the last cut on side one. Topped by a guitar solo leading into the vocal, the introduction to "Wide River" is short, but sweet.

Bishop's lyrics concentrate on road weariness, whiskey and women. He sings about bar-room brawls down near the Arkansas line, rollin' home to his old lady and "gettin' down" with a good bottle. Ho-hum.

It could be Elvin Bishop has been on the road far too long. After all, most of the tunes on this record would fit quite well in the repertoire of a honky-tonk travelin' band. I think the music would make for good live listening, but as studio material, it's a trifle thin.

In the case of "Juke Joint Jump," the lush Capricorn studio in Macon, Georgia makes a lot of difference, turning what sounds to me like an average road group, into a lick, polished recording band. Yes, I recognize the talent I hear and at the same time I deplore vague, commercial music created simply to make somebody rich and it's not the musicians in Bishop's band who come out on the lucky side. Elvin Bishop is a commodity band providing material for a certain segment of the society which remains a mystery to me. I imagine a southerner would enjoy him much more than this damn Yankee.

"Song for My Lady"

McCoy Tyner

McCoy Tyner is one of the half dozen finest jazz pianists in this country today, an innovator of astronomical talent, a musician who never ceases to amaze.

Tyner worked for several years with John Coltrane, legendary tenor sax player, whose work has influenced every major jazz artist. Tyner himself is an awesome influence with his beautiful technique, an inspiration for many young piano players to emulate. Tyner is singular his voicings on piano are unique and moving. He is a rarity, a true musician through and through.

At this point in time I am listening quite a lot to three jazz pianists, Keith Jarrett, Dollar Brand and Tyner. Some jazz freaks tag Tyner with top honors among today's virtuosos. Some reserve that praise for Cecil Taylor. If you'd like to sample some of this joy, pick up a copy of "Song For My Lady" by Tyner.

Michael White, an extraordinary violin player, joins Tyner for the restless "Native Song," which opens the album. Charles Tolliver, another great, plays flugelhorn; Sonny Fortune is on flute and saxophone, Calvin Hill picks electric bass; Alphonse Mouzon, late of the super jazz-rock group "Weather Report," provides the drumming with the infamous Mtume, adding percussive affects.

Tyner's music is a collage of sound ranging from tribal African rhythms into stylized New York City jazz. On this particular LP, his session mates include the very finest people available on their respective instruments.

Tyner sets the pace for the group, leading his musician friends through wild frantic passages on the rousing "Native Song" and coaxing them through the torturous, "Night Has A Thousand Eyes." Actually, although Tyner is superb and obviously in command here-setting the mood of each piece, White, Tolliver and the rest often match McCoy stride for stride. Michael White is a well know, highly skilled musician with several releases of his own.

Mtume is like an honest slice of African music served on your turntable. His percussive work is so pure. Bass player Calvin Hill is dynamic and powerful. Hill glides, drives, twists and turns, filling the bottom of the music with clear beauty. Sonny Fortune is simply outstanding, a long time jazz virtuoso, he is quick and smooth, a delicate sax player and triumphant as he blows through the long "Night Has A Thousand Eyes."

What more can I say? McCoy Tyner is a delight!

ZUGG BROTHERS AND CO. — The five band members comprising the local country-rock group known as the "Zugg Brothers and Co. featuring Christi," are (left to right): Dave Perry, steel guitar; John Zugg, bass guitar;

Christi Adams Shoemaker, lead vocals; Larry Zugg, lead vocals and lead guitar and Randy Zugg, drums. All members of the group sing, including manager, Jack Sanders, who occasionally sits in on a number with them.

Country-rock group Is home grown

Can a high school English teacher, two meatcutters, a man whose first musical instrument was a broom, a steel guitarist who dreams of Nashville and a singing airplane pilot, find happiness on the nightclub circuit? Definitely, yes; for, "The Zugg Brothers and Co. featuring Christi," is doing just that!

The country-rock group, all coming from the southern Ohio area, is comprised of members: Christi Adams Shoemaker, Larry, John and Randy Zugg, Dave Perry and manager, Jack Sanders. They have been playing together four months and are booking their talents at local night spots such as the Lafayette Inn and Club 22, located on the CCC-Highway-W and the Eagles Lodge, but are available to play anywhere, at anytime.

Manager, Jack Sanders, has provided the group with direction and promotion and coined the motto, "Integrity in business is important - we guarantee to perform," for them. Sanders explained many nightclub owners have been disillusioned by musicians of the past, branding them as the most irresponsible people around, who show up when they feel like it and who can't be counted upon for anything. On the super-fame level, Sly Stone and his family were notorious for their not-so-professional disappearing act before scheduled performances and the negative vibes from this got around fast.

"We plan to change this stereotype musician image," Sanders stated and continued, "when we say we'll perform, you can count on the fact that rain, nor sleet, nor dark of night will prevent us from it - the postal carrier and the Zugg Brothers and Co. will be there!"

Below is a biographical run-down on the band members:

Larry Zugg
"When I was 7-years-old, I used to go around the house playing a broom, imitating Elvis Presley. My mother got tired of following me around all the time, picking up the bristles and talked my father into buying me a guitar," the 28-year-old leader of the group reminisced. "Dad, who was a musician himself and had a radio show at the time, featured me on the air at the age of eight, singing 'I Ain't Nothin' But a Hounddog' and I became hooked on the whole performing thing."

Larry, who lives in Hillsboro, plays lead guitar in the band and handles the lead male vocals, is also proficient on piano and organ. He admits to being influenced by the singing of Mac Davis.

Christi Adams Shoemaker
Christi is another band member who received an early start in show business.

"At the age of 13, I entered the Paint Valley Jamboree Talent Contest, singing 'Your Cheatin' Heart,' and won!" she exclaimed. "The jamboree gave me a chance to brush shoulders and work with country successes like Merle Haggard, Buck Owens, Porter Wagoner and Loretta Lynn, to name a few and I knew the life of a country singer was one I would enjoy," she added.

Christi does the lead vocals, often while slapping a tamborine against her palm or thigh. She also plays guitar and piano and surprisingly enough, has a degree in education, geared towards teaching high school English, which she would also like to pursue.

Christi, 23, of Bainbridge, has been with the band for only a month. She lists Ann Murray as the most influential singer in her life.

John Zugg
John, 20, was taught to play bass guitar by older brother, Larry and decided he liked the instrument. He, Larry and youngest brother, Randy (who plays drums), have been making music together for two years. John is married, has two children and works during the day at Wilson's Locker as a meatcutter. John and his family live in Blanchester.

Randy Zugg
Randy is the group's phenomina. Playing drums for only 12 months, he radiates a natural affinity and mastery for percussion, which makes one think his baby-crib came equipped with a trap set somewhere within. He, like brother John, works at Wilson's Locker, meatcutting during the daylight hours. Randy resides in Wilmington.

Dave Perry
Dave, like Christi, has been a member of the Zugg Brothers and Co. for only a month, but he has been playing steel guitar for a year. Probably the most versatile musician in the group, Dave professes to play five-string banjo, bass guitar, guitar, harmonica and piano, along with steel guitar and singing lead on some of the numbers.

Now 26, Dave, started learning guitar 14 years ago and playing with various country musicians, one of which may have been his wife, Marsha, who shyly admits to being a drummer.

Jack Sanders
Jack, quite by accident, heard the band one evening while out on the town and discovered he knew Larry Zugg because the two work together at the Ohio Bureau of Employment Services. They started talking, discovered many views held in common and worked out an arrangement where Jack would manage the group.

Jack, who is president of the Fayette County Pilot's Association, admits to always having had a yen to sing. "The group is breaking me in on a couple numbers and I'm having the time of my life!" he exclaimed.

"The Zugg Brothers and Co., featuring Christi," will be in the neighborhood for awhile. Catch em if ya can!

Entertainment provided by junior arts theatre

Funded by the Ohio Foundation and the Ohio Arts Council, the Columbus Junior Theatre of the Arts provides central Ohio with a wealth of theatre-related services in addition to fine entertainment.

The purpose of the theatre is to promote interest, appreciation and excellence in the field of dramatic art. Located at 115 W. Main Street, Columbus, the theatre not only presents public plays but also operates one of the relatively few schools of drama in the state.

Unlike those drama schools associated with colleges or universities, the Columbus Junior Theatre of the Arts accepts students of all ages. Programs there are designed for youngsters age four years and older. Some 300 students per term from elementary to high school age study all aspects of theatre at the school.

Specialization in such areas as acting, stage craft, lighting, puppeteering and dance is available, and these areas are subdivided still further. Dance instruction for instance can be in the fields of tap, ballet or modern dance technique.

The theatre hosts four performances each year presented through the Discovery Series. These plays are written especially for children and are performed by a professional touring group from New York.

School children from surrounding cities are invited to come to the shows, and for many of the students it is their first contact with professional theatre. Some 3,000 schoolage children pack the theatre for each of two Saturday performances.

A touring group from the theatre performs for approximately 32,000 students per year. Schools arrange for the troupe to visit their school and perform.

Don Riber, a Washington C.H. resident who has served on the executive board of the theatre for six years, said the troupe has visited schools here in the past.

Through the efforts of the Mother's Circle, the troupe has presented puppet shows as well as full-length plays at several county schools, including Bloomingburg and Miami Trace.

Riber explained that the group begins the program with an explanation of dramatic art in general as well as an outline of the play they are about to see.

Only after this introduction of the basic elements of theatre do the actors perform. In this way they seek to build an appreciation and interest in live drama as an art form.

It is not difficult for a child to be critical of a live play after watching years of television. Even the most experienced actor occasionally stumbles over a line, and unless the student realizes that a sequence in a motion picture may have been retaken a dozen times or more, he may fault the live performance.

With an understanding of what is required of the actors in a dramatic presentation, the number of lines, the detail of movement and other complexities, the student can more fully appreciate a performance.

Those who become immersed in the art of dramatic presentation can find great interest in these occasional slips. Watching an artist improvise momentarily after a fellow actor has dropped a line can be just as rewarding as the most perfectly executed dramatic scene.

The theatre has three terms of summer classes of three weeks each. The first began Monday and continues through July 3. The two later terms begin July 7 and July 28. Registration fees of $10 and tuition of $27 is required for each session, and classes are held from 1 to 4 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

Auditions for junior and senior high school students will be held July 7 and 8 for the theatre's summer musical production "No, No Nanette." Rehearsals for the play will be held from 1 to 4 p.m. Monday through Thursday July 7 through Aug. 14. A tuition fee of $50 is required for participation in the play, but some scholarships are available for exceptional pupils.

The eight-year existence of the Ohio Junior Theatre of the Arts has provided hundreds of students with the basic techniques necessary for theatre-related careers and offered thousands of youngsters the opportunity to experience the joy of viewing fine dramatic presentation.

'River Rat' pilots keep rapid pace

By BRENDAN RILEY
Associated Press Writer
CARSON CTY, Nev. (AP) — The river boatman warns passengers to hang on, and then expertly maneuvers his raft through thrashing waves and past treacherous rocks to calmer water.

The riders, who pay up to $50 a day for such trips, bail water out of the rubber rafts and make sure the beer sack is still trailing behind. The boatman rows for the next rapids a few miles away.

The experience is repeated during runs that last up to two weeks or more. Then sunbaked passengers scatter for homes and the boatmen head for the next "put in" point and another load of customers.

The "river rat" raft pilot is one of hundreds of commercial boatmen who are involved in a multimillion dollar business run on big rivers that thread through scenic canyons throughout western states.

They're found mainly in Wyoming, Utah, Colorado and New Mexico on runs down the Colorado, Green, Yampa and San Juan rivers; in Idaho on the Salmon River; and in California on the Stanislaus, American or Tuolumne rivers.

Gag rule invoked by KSU trial judge

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — A "gag rule" was invoked for all those concerned with the Kent State trial because of the fear that the case would be "poisoned by improper publicity," according to the federal court judge hearing the case.

"I shall not hesitate to deal harshly with any party whose actions or comments may jeopardize the finality of the trial," U.S. District Court Judge Don J. Young said in his brief filed Wednesday with the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The appellate court has scheduled a Friday hearing to hear a complaint brought by CBS Inc. against the rule, which prohibits participants in the trial, their relatives and close friends from discussing the case with the news media.

The big ride is down more than 200 miles of Colorado River water in the Grand Canyon. More than 15,000 persons ran the river last year.

The boatmen have a casual manner that belies their skill at negotiating the rivers and their ability to keep themselves and their riders in the boat and the river out of the boat.

Besides being able to spot "big Bertha" waves or rocks that can flip rafts, the boatmen double as cooks at riverside campsites.

Most have some emergency medical training and many can provide a running commentary on geologic features exposed by the rivers over millions of years.

Pay runs up to $60 a day for the boatmen. With little chance to spend wages, they can salt away much of their earnings over the season from May to October.

The gross revenue take for their employers is now estimated at about $11 million a year. There are at least 20 companies on the Colorado River alone. Most have developed since the mid-1960s.

The boatmen have wide-ranging backgrounds, but most have previous experience with kayaks, canoes or noncommercial rafting.

Local life insurance agent at annual sales seminar

SAN FRANCISCO, Fred L. Domenico, 137 River Road, Washington C.H., and New York Life Insurance Co. agent, is among the more than 3,500 members of the Million Dollar Round Table (MDRT) here this week for the exclusive life insurance sales organization's annual seminar. Members from around the world meet each year at their own expense to share ideas and techniques at what is recognized as the international "sales forum par excellence."

Featured speakers at the five-day seminar include James B. Longley, governor of Maine and 1972 MDRT president; Lynn Caine, author of the best-selling book, "Widow"; and Dr. R. Alec Mackenzie, internationally-recognized time management author and consultant. In addition, more than 50 sessions feature in depth presentations on technical life insurance topics by MDRT members.

The MDRT is an independent association serving more than 12,000 members, each of whom has sold more than $1 million in life insurance during the past year. MDRT members, recognized as the top echelon of life insurance salesmen, must meet association production and other requirements each year. It is estimated that less than three per cent of the world's life insurance sales force annually qualifies for the MDRT.

Prof devises plan to use fuel, avoid air pollution

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A plan for Ohio to use its fuel sources this winter and still avoid adverse concentrations of air pollution has been suggested by an Ohio State University professor.

Prof. Wilpen L. Gorr of the School of Public Administration recommended that natural gas supplies be evenly distributed to Ohio's metropolitan industries and that Ohio coal be used for the balance of fuel requirements.

"This would be a short-run, strategic kind of solution which uses the resources we have and spreads them out in a rational, efficient way," Gorr said.

Gorr, a specialist in air pollution and energy-related problems, and Ralph L. Bangs, a graduate student in public administration, conducted a study of Franklin County industrial boiler fuel use and geographic distribution.

From that, they wrote their report and met with representatives of the Ohio Environmental Protection Agency, which Gorr said is interested in doing a similar study statewide.

If changes aren't made, Gorr said, industries throughout the state could face a repeat of last winter's severe natural gas allocation cutbacks. Many officials have advocated use of Ohio coal to keep boilers fueled, he said.

Gorr noted that Ohio coal is high in sulfur and ash content and produces air-polluting sulfur dioxide gas and particulates, or soot.

In Franklin County, Gorr and Bangs found five "pockets" of industry which are large users of boiler fuel.

"If each of these 'pockets' got a balanced share of what natural gas will be available," he said, "our (study) shows that coal-caused air pollution would be within federal standards."

Under the proposal, boilers with coal-burning capacity and high stacks may get less gas because their smoke would be more easily dispersed by winds.

He said some companies with gas-fired boilers would have to make some technological changes in order to be able to burn coal also. But some companies which have maintained their old coal boilers as a backup could start using them on a supplemental basis, he said.

MISS JULIE A. BEGIN

MISS LENORA SLAVEN

Mr. and Mrs. David Begin of 1332 Dayton Ave., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Julie Ann, to Kevan Gail Garringer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gail Garringer of 14738 Rt. 35NW, Jamestown.

Miss Begin, a 1975 graduate of Washington Senior High School, is employed at Moore Adcrafters.

Her fiancé, a 1972 Miami Trace High School graduate, is engaged in farming.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Slaven Jr., 1292 Dayton Ave., are announcing the engagement of their daughter, Lenora, to Kevin J. Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack C. Smith of 4 Sunny Drive.

Miss Slaven, a graduate of Washington Senior High School, is presently attending Ohio State School of Cosmetology, Columbus.

Mr. Smith, also a WSHS graduate, is now attending Ohio State School of Barber Styling in Columbus.

Both will graduate in February. No definite date has been set for the wedding.

Dear Abby: Hot embrace of mom and son burns girl friend

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
DEAR ABBY: I must make a comment about the woman whose husband tickles her until she is hysterical, even though she begs him to stop.

I had a husband like that. He used to shadowbox around me, occasionally landing a genuinely painful blow here and there. He would dance around, prizefighter-style, saying "Let's mix it up a little." He would pretend it was all in fun, but I knew he was sadistic when I begged him to stop and he wouldn't. I even told him that if he'd quit that little shadowboxing game for good, I would accept it as my Christmas present. Even that didn't work.

Then I casually asked a friend of mine in the presence of her husband and mine if her husband ever played such games. Of course he hadn't. And then a knowing look passed between the two of them.

He never played that game again. A psychiatrist later told me that when I exposed his cruelty to our friends, he saw himself as others saw him, and he stopped voluntarily.

So maybe this poor "tickled" woman should try the same approach.

BEEN THERE
DEAR BEEN: It's worth a try. Isn't it a shame that some people are more concerned about how they appear to strangers than how their own families view them?

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a grown son and his mother who kiss each other on the mouth? My boyfriend is 27, and you should see the way he and his mother kiss! Every hello and goodbye is like a love scene in the movies.

The first time I noticed it was last New Year's Eve. They embraced like a pair of lovers, and they held a kiss for what seemed like five minutes without coming up for air. I was so angry I didn't even feel like kissing him after that.

It looks like his mother loves him the way I do. Could I be mistaken? Or could I be overreacting because I love him?

WONDERING
DEAR WONDERING: It depends. You don't say whether your boyfriend is the KISSER or the KISSEE. If he's the kisser, he may have a problem.

DEAR ABBY: Please put something in your column to shake up some of those thoughtless people who make stinging remarks to pregnant women. I'm pregnant, and I've had people ask, "When's your due date?" And when I tell them, they say, "You'll never last that long!"

Fellowship meeting set here this Fall

The Kings Daughters Sunday School Class of First Christian Church met in the home of Mrs. Charles Van Pelt in Greenfield, Ohio, for the June meeting and class annual picnic.

Concert attracts at Willis studio

A brilliant concert was given Sunday evening at 8 p.m. at the residence studio of Mrs. Robert E. Willis, Willis Court.

Miss Collette Diane Vandenberg, violinist, and Mr. Paul S. Ferris, pianist, charmed about 55 guests with their beautiful music. Also, the weather was an added factor for pleasant listening.

Miss Vandenberg playing with a deep colorful tone and emotional feeling in all of her numbers. She opened the program with Serenade by Joseph Haydn; Air on the G String by J.S. Bach; and Cesar Franck's Sonata in A Major was a long and demanding composition for both the soloist and accompanist. TV Viewing

By JAY SHARBUTT

AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Americans usually can get a quick rundown on the major speeches, news reports and commentaries broadcast on foreign stations simply by reading published accounts or watching TV newscasts.

But few realize they also now can get complete or excerpted texts of the same broadcasts by subscribing to a worldwide monitoring service administered by...would you believe...the Central Intelligence Agency.

You can even charge it on your American Express card, the CIA says.

For $1,000 a year, you can get daily translations of foreign broadcasts in eight regions, or, if you prefer, just one region for $125.

The areas are Asia and the Pacific, the Middle East and North Africa, Western Europe, Sub-Sahara Africa, the People's Republic of China, Eastern Europe, the Soviet Union and Latin America.

The foreign news texts primarily are for interested federal agencies, but they can be bought by the public from the National Technical Information Service, an arm of the U.S. Commerce Department, the CIA says.

The monitoring operation, known as the Foreign Broadcast Information Service—FBIS, publishes the material as broadcast, without background information and interpretation.

A CIA spokesman declined because of national security laws to say how many persons FBIS employs or in how many and which countries it operates. He conceded it's logical to assume that foreign countries know their public broadcasts are monitored for FBIS, but said that to name the countries might well jeopardize the monitoring operation there.

Until two years ago, he said, the FBIS reports were available only to U.S. agencies, although some portions of them always had been made available for scrutiny by newsmen and scholars.

He said certain portions weren't made public "because they were considered for official use only."

But now, he says, everything the governments gets from FBIS is available to subscribers of the service, whom he says are mainly news organizations, universities, libraries and members of Congress.

Avco proposes station sale

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — An agreement in principle has been reached involving the sale of television station WLWD, Dayton, to Grinnell College in Grinnell, Iowa, according to John T. Murphy, president of Avco Broadcasting Co.

WLWD, the NBC affiliate in Dayton, is ranked as the 44th television market in the U.S. WLWD has been owned by Avco Broadcasting since it went on the air in 1949.

The agreement is subject to the approval of the Board of Directors of Avco Corporation, completion of a definitive agreement, and the approval of the Federal Communications Commission.

Foreign agents gather much political info

WASHINGTON (AP) — Foreign intelligence agents are gathering "considerable political and economic information" through an increasing number of contacts with members of Congress and their staffs, a senior FBI official says.

"Many of these contacts are of a clandestine nature" in which the intelligence agent poses as an official of a foreign government, said James B. Adams, deputy associate FBI director.

However, he said there is no indication that Soviet and other foreign agents have succeeded in actually infiltrating any congressional offices by recruiting a congressional staff member to gather and pass along information.

The Scripps-Howard news service reported Tuesday that the Rockefeller Commission received evidence during its five-month investigation of the Central Intelligence Agency that Soviet-bloc agents may have infiltrated congressional offices.

However, a White House official with access to the evidence turned up by the commission denied the report, saying "there is absolutely no evidence" of infiltration of Congress by the KGB, the Soviet intelligence organization.

Chessie gets major parts of 3 lines

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP)—The U.S. Railway Association (USRA) says it has approved in principle purchase by the Chessie System of major parts of three eastern rail lines under provisions of the Regional Rail Reorganization Act.

Chessie Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Hays Watkins said Wednesday the rail properties the Chessie is buying include sections of the Reading railroad, sections of the Erie Lackawanna Railway east of Wadsworth, Ohio, and Penn Central rail properties in the Charleston, W. Va. area.

Details of the proposed transaction are yet to be worked out, but Watkins estimated total compensation for the properties at $115 million.

Under the proposal, Chessie would take over all the rolling stock of the Erie and the Reading and about 1,200 miles of Erie mainline track from near Wadsworth to New York. More than 800 miles of the Reading trackage would be included.

The mass of the earth is 6 sextillion 588 quintillion short tons.

Canadians seek assessment of Royal Mounted Police

Editor's Note - Nelson Eddy may have had to get permission from his Canadian North West Mounted Police commander to marry Jeannette McDonald, but that's not the case in the Mounties today. Things have changed - but for some Canadians not enough.

By The Associated Press
REGINA, Canada (AP) — The federal government is looking into the Royal Canadian Mounted Police because of criticism that its training and discipline are too harsh and too militaristic.

Critics say recruits seeking $14,000-a-year as Mounties have been pushed to the point of exhaustion and that intrusions have been made into the private lives of members of Canada's national police force.

Officials at its training center here in Saskatchewan Province counter the critics by saying that conditions have changed so much that few of the retired old hands would know it's the same police force.

When it was organized in 1873 as the North West Mounted Police only a small force was recruited to patrol the sparsely settled Canadian northwest. The name was changed to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police — the RCMP, as it is called in Canada — in 1920. And now the force numbers about 15,000.

Traditionally, the Mountie wore a red tunic and a wide-brimmed hat. He rode a horse in summer and a dog sled in winter.

The horse and the red tunic are still part of the modern RCMP, but only for ceremonial occasions. The uniform of the new Mountie on regular duty is a brown jacket and blue pants. He rides on snowmobiles and squad cars and flies in helicopters and airplanes.

Your modern-day Mountie could be a woman. But at Depot Division, the training center, there still is saluting, marching in parade, short hair and sharply pressed uniforms.

Addressing himself to the criticism, Supt. W. F. McRae, the chief training officer, says:

"People are reacting to a visual relationship with the military."

"The military do foot drill and we do foot drill ... but to assume that this generates a kind of military mentality ... that's missing the point entirely. If we were doing that we'd be out of business."

"Police training requires that we gear the individual to respond. Police work is an individual response to every situation."

"Looking at discipline in that context is also a mistake because foot drill is not where discipline is learned. Foot drill is simply a technique for quick response, for quick obedience to a set of commands. Discipline is taught through experiencing the examples of things done the right way ... We must convince the student that the standards we are trying to achieve are worth while. Foot drill has nothing to do with discipline."

Chief Supt. H. P. Tadeson, the depot's commanding officer, said recruits themselves would like more marching and the public loves the pomp and ceremony, but the real work is done in classrooms.

MacRae said more than half of the six-month training course given as many as 640 male and female recruits at a time is spent on such academic subjects as law, human relations, psychology, crisis intervention, minority policing and community relations.

Two honors awarded to local historian

Two honors have been bestowed upon Washington C.H. historian B.E. Kelley.

Kelley has been recognized as an outstanding member of the National Society of Literature and the Arts, and has been chosen to appear in a reference volume entitled "Community Leaders and Noteworthy Americans."

The National Society of Literature and the Arts is aware of his efforts to promote involvement in literature, music and the fine arts, and recognize his achievements in the creative arts.

The American Biographical Institute has chosen to include a biography of Kelly in the bicentennial edition of "Community Leaders and Noteworthy Americans." The curator of the Fayette County Historical Museum for many years, he is a member of the Ohio Historical Society which honored the accomplishments of him and his wife

Elva last year. The museum itself has been added to the National Registry of Historical landmarks.

The biographical annual serves as a reference of those persons about who information may be sought because of their accomplishments in government, civic activities, science, engineering, medicine, law, finance, business, education, religion, literature, art, music or other fields.

Each biographical listing contains essential facts including birthdate, education, career details, present position, honors, awards and other publications in which the person is cited.

Its purpose is to identify outstanding citizens who have made significant contributions in their field and to provide a permanent record of those whose lives will become a part of the history of their community, state or country.

Antioch College president out

NEW YORK (AP) — Antioch College trustees, meeting in closed session, Wednesday removed Dr. James P. Dixon as college president.

Dixon, 57, served as president of the Yellow Springs, Ohio school for 16 years. His tenure had been under fire since 1973 when a 42-day student strike crippled the campus. After the strike ended, he submitted his resignation, effective June 30, 1977.

Dixon drew further criticism in March by firing Yellow Springs chancellor Francis Shea in a dispute over budget matters. Trustees suspended Dixon April 26 and reinstated Shea.

The board voted 16-2 for his ouster, which had been expected. Trustees expressed "appreciation" for the former Denver health commissioner's services in announcing the removal.

Robert Levin, a former trustee, was appointed interim administrator by the board at the April meeting and will remain in that position which carries all the duties and responsibilities of president, until a successor can be found.

Sex discrimination law may harm college sports

By TOM SEPPY

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head football coach at the University of Texas said today new federal regulations barring sex discrimination in the nation's schools could destroy all intercollegiate athletics because they jeopardize revenue-producing sports.

Darrell Royal, who also is president of the American Football Coaches Association, urged a House Education subcommittee to place a moratorium on the implementation of the new Title IX of the 1972 Omnibus Education Act until a study can be made to see what economic effects it will have on intercollegiate athletics.

"Any way we look at them, we can see that they will either eliminate, kill or seriously weaken the intercollegiate program now in existence," said Royal.

The coach, who was joined by seven of his colleagues, told the subcommittee that revenue-producing sports such as football and basketball should be exempt from the guidelines because the schools do not receive federal funds to support them.

He said if money derived from and spent on football and basketball had to be shared with other men's and women's programs "all of our intercollegiate programs would be weakened."

Appearing with Royal were coaches Bob Blackman of the University of Illinois, Jerry Claiborne of the University of Maryland, Frank Kush of Arizona State, Tom Osborne of the University of Nebraska, Bo Schembechler of the University of Michigan, Mike White of the University of California at Berkeley, and Joe Yukica of Boston College.

When Vice President Ford, a former Michigan center, approved the new federal regulations, a lot of football coaches shook their heads in amazement.

"Our members are terribly disappointed and surprised," said Tom Hansen, assistant director of the National Collegiate Athletic Association. "They can't believe that a football-playing President would do that to us, that he wouldn't be aware of all the dangers in Title IX, that he'd sign it."

"It's very probably going to destroy men's sports programs," Hansen said. "The members are kind of stunned and they're asking, 'Is it really true?'"

It was true. And the new regulations will further complicate the operation of men's sports programs which already are severely strapped financially because of inflation.

Your Horoscope

BY FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.
FRIDAY, JUNE 20

ARIES

(March 21 to April 20)

An inner excitement and heightened anticipation could send you off the sound path in both job and personal affairs. Make a special effort to maintain composure.

TAURUS

(April 21 to May 21)

Some "off-beat" ideas may be proffered. Be alert, and reject promptly. Also, avoid eccentric behavior, extremes in word or deed.

GEMINI

(May 22 to June 21)

This day will need team players as well as individualists. Try to curb your usual desire to "go it alone" — cooperate.

CANCER

(June 22 to July 23)

Fine lunar influences back your efforts now. Especially favored: scientific and technical pursuits, educational and literary interests.

LEO

(July 24 to Aug. 23)

Solar influences now stimulate your ambitions, energy and desire to "get into the action." Fine! But don't waste time or talents on worthless ventures.

VIRGO

(Aug. 24 to Sept. 23)

Certain enticing distractions could interfere with normal requisites. Your indomitable spirit should offset such follies. Keep eyes on the ball!

LIBRA

(Sept. 24 to Oct. 23)

A more or less routine day, but some slightly unconventional and off-beat activities during the evening hours could be fun.

SCORPIO

(Oct. 24 to Nov. 22)

Your innate aggressiveness and self-will could be liabilities now. Certain associates will be oversensitive; will resent interference of any kind.

SAGITTARIUS

(Nov. 23 to Dec. 21)

Stellar restrictions lift. A favorable report now gives you the "green light" to go ahead with important plans, decisions.

CAPRICORN

(Dec. 22 to Jan. 20)

A good day for dealing with superiors, with persons in authority generally. Any or all should be receptive to your ideas.

AQUARIUS

(Jan. 21 to Feb. 19)

Stimulating influences now heighten your ambitions and energies, but don't overtax your energies. Delegate some work to associates.

PISCES

(Feb. 20 to March 20)

Your intuition is one of the strongest in the zodiacal spectrum. If you get a hunch now, act on it. Stars are on your side.

YOU BORN TODAY are agile of mind and extremely dexterous with your hands as well. You are more serious in your outlook on life than many other Gemini's and could make an outstanding success in the business world or in the scientific field. But you also have a creative side which would best express itself in literature of the profound type. Your intuition is keen and you are extremely sensitive — much more so than your outward show of bravado indicates. You are gregarious, meet people with ease and exchange ideas readily; would probably do very well in any occupation which involves travel, dealing with the public.

Ladybug backers not disappointed

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — They waited and waited. For more than four hours about 15 elementary schoolchildren, dressed up like ladybugs, sat restlessly in the balcony of the House of Representatives.

And they were not disappointed. After extensive debate on items like malpractice insurance, the House voted 85-8 to designate the ladybug as the state insect.

Americans can't really afford homes

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — According to an old and often-violated rule of thumb, a family can afford to pay 2½ times annual income for a home.

Since the median price of the typical one-family home now is between $36,000 and $37,000, and median income is around $13,000, that rule, if applied, would mean a good many Americans couldn't afford a new home.

Presumably they would continue to rent instead. But, say the economists of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, problems are presented in that direction too. And the major problem is, of course, price.

Saul Klamman, chief economist of the savings bank group, observes that it is increasingly difficult for developer-builders and bankers to come up with economically viable plans for multifamily dwellings.

Rising land, material, money and labor costs have plunged that segment of housing into a deeper depression than most people realize. After peaking at about one million units in 1972, the annual rate now is just one-quarter of that.

It is for this reason — the depression in multifamily, rental units — that the association remains relatively glum about housing's future.

Just a few months ago some forecasters expected an influx of savings to stimulate more mortgages, and it has, but not sharply.

Both consumers and bankers seem hesitant and uncertain.

The potential buyer balks at rising prices and mortgage rates that remain higher than he can adjust to.

The banks are almost mortally afraid of being caught with long-term, low-interest loans on their books. To them, the pressure of interest rates is upward.

As they see it, they are being forced to act as if this were an economically stable society. It isn't, they say. That is, they feel they are asked to commit themselves for 30 years ahead when they can't see beyond a few weeks.

The savings bankers, and indeed most bankers, insist that the future stability of interest rates depends upon having fiscal policy share the burden with monetary policy. Cut the deficits; promote efficiency, they say.

Morrow family involved in funeral directing since 1877

Thursday, June 19, 1975
Washington C. H. (O.)

Steve Huffman and David Morrow

By SANDY FOSSON

"This work tells on you quickly and it can be a very disruptive business," David C. Morrow said frankly of the profession he has followed as a funeral director for the past nine years.

"It takes years literally for a person to adjust but it makes for a special closeness with the family," he added.

The 34-year-old Morrow, co-owner of the Morrow-Huffman Funeral Homes in Washington C.H. and Jeffersonville, related some of the major crises he has encountered from the offset, such as deciding whether to pursue the funeral directing profession and, once accepting his decision, explaining to his own children the occupation and meaning of death.

The Morrow family has been involved in the business since 1877. In 1904, the late S.C. Morrow, David's grandfather, acquired the Jeffersonville firm from Thomas Williams. He operated the firm until his death in 1942 when G. Max Morrow (David's father) took over operations.

Morrow said, "Oddly enough, I was dissuaded by my parents" into following the family business of funeral directing after two generations under the profession. "I was bent toward science all through high school and they felt I should go into it," he added. "They wanted me to have a wider horizon and I was given the opportunity to try everything else first."

Morrow said he did start at Ohio State University in engineering but always maintained an interest in mortuary science and once making up his mind to follow the family business, "I've never regretted it."

Morrow said a funeral director "deals with people at a time when they need assistance; you feel needed, which is something valuable to every human being."

He added that his attitudes toward life and death had changed quite drastically since taking up a profession in funeral directing.

"You realize just how mortal we are by dealing with death every day," Morrow said. "The older I get, the more I value every minute of my life."

Morrow said one important reason for his appreciation of life is his continual encounter with death while most people, on the average, experience a close death only once every 10 years.

Morrow said he explained death to his children at an early age as not a time when "angels whisked you away" but "death is death, not something to be feared but merely a transition to another and new life."

He added, "I'm intrigued how quickly children establish very good mental attitudes toward death whereas the parents cannot. I've seen children explain and comfort the parents at services," he said.

Morrow, who resides above the Washington C.H. funeral home at 415 E. Court St. with his children, David, 13, Susan, 9, and Melissa, 6, taught his children to lead a normal active life but to have respect for visitors in the home at all times.

He formed the 50-50 partnership with 23-year-old Stephen Huffman of Jeffersonville last Jan. 1 because "if you don't have younger blood in your business, you're in trouble."

Huffman conducted his internship in funeral directing and embalming under Morrow at the Jeffersonville funeral home in 1973 and has successfully completed state examinations in funeral direction and embalming with licenses in both.

While Morrow graduated in 1962 from the Cincinnati College of Mortuary Science after attending Ohio State University and the U.S. Naval Academy, Huffman graduated from the same school in 1973.

A 1970 graduate of Miami Trace High School, Huffman is married to the former Rita Coil and is residing above the Jeffersonville funeral home at 41 S. Main St. Both he and Morrow are very active in community affairs including being members of the Jeffersonville United Methodist Church. Morrow is an active leader with Jeffersonville Boy Scout Troop No. 67, a member of the Jeffersonville Chamber of Commerce and Eastern Star, the Washington C.H. Shrine Club, a member of the Fayette County Board of Health, a first aid instructor for the Jeffersonville Fire Department and a member of the convention committee of the Ohio Funeral Directors Association.

Huffman is also a member of the Jeffersonville Lions Club and serves as a coach of the sixth grade basketball team at Jeffersonville Elementary School.

Collective bargain action delayed

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The chairman of the House Commerce and Labor Committee said Wednesday his panel would not recommend action on a major collective bargaining bill until next month.

Rep. Leonard J. Camera, D-53 Lorain, said "language problems" and uncertainty over the new two-year state budget could delay a committee vote for up to three weeks.

But Camera said he would definitely seek floor action on the Senate-passed plan before the Aug. 1 summer recess.

The wide-ranging measure that would repeal the state's anti-strike Ferguson Law was reported back from a subcommittee to the full panel for a review hearing Tuesday night.

The subcommittee removed a provision that would have permitted public employees to establish "union shops" wherein all workers at an agency must belong to a union. In its place they inserted "agency shop" language which leaves union membership optional but requires non-members to pay a service fee, equivalent to dues, to the bargaining agent.

The bill would permit public employees to bargain collectively and strike when arbitration efforts fail to settle a dispute. Policemen, firemen and prison guards would be barred from strike actions.

Camera planned to continue hearings on the measure next week.

Columbus man BCI superintendent

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Jack E. McCormick of Columbus has been named superintendent of the Bureau of Criminal Identification and Investigation, Atty. Gen. William J. Brown announced.

The attorney general said Wednesday Richard A. Szilagyi of Columbus has been appointed chief of the Bureau of Employment Services section of the attorney general's office.

McCormick, 32, joined the attorney general's staff in 1973 as director of investigations for BCI. The Akron native was named acting superintendent of the bureau in April.

Szilagy, 47, has been an assistant attorney general in the administrative agencies section since 1971.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ten scientists are conducting field research for the Institute of Polar Studies of Ohio State University this summer.

Their projects range from mapping and environmental studies in Alaska to glacial and floral changes since the last ice age in southern Argentina.

Funeral home constructed in mid-1800s

BY SANDY FOSSON

The 40-room, two-story Morrow-Huffman Funeral Home, formerly the Parrett Funeral Home at 415 E. Court St., was originally built in the mid-1880s as a residence for those in the legal profession.

The E. Court Street building had also served as a convalescent home in the 1930s and housed two other funeral homes before Robert C. Parrett, a funeral director in Fayette County for 46 years, relocated his business to the building in 1954.

Parrett sold the funeral home to David C. Morrow and Stephen J. Huffman, owners of the Morrow-Huffman Funeral Home in Jeffersonville, on Jan. 1 but is still available at the funeral home upon request by a family.

After acquiring the home, Morrow and Huffman have spent months renovating and remodeling the exterior and interior of the building in an attempt to restore the home to the period in which it was built, both architecturally and in its furnishings and decorations.

This Saturday and Sunday from noon until 9 p.m., the two men will unveil their accomplishments to date with all materials included in the home obtained locally.

Morrow and Huffman designed the schemes for each room but were assisted by several local decorators. "It may not have the polished effect," Morrow said, "but it still holds that small, local atmosphere."

Many of the items in the funeral home are family pieces from the Morrow and Huffman families. "These things we feel personalize the home even more," Morrow added.

He said the history of the Morrow firm goes back 98 years and "We hope we will be here another 98 years. There have been a lot of lives entwined in the business."

At the Washington C.H. location, Morrow said only the "Blue Room" and the smoking and coffee lounge did not completely follow the Victorian period of the other room furnishings in the funeral home.

The Blue Room includes a Williamsburg mural purchased from the original Williamsburg colonial paperers while the lounge features a mural and wallpaping of the U.S.S. Constitution and Old Ironside to commemorate the American Bicentennial period.

However, Morrow said his "pride and joy" is a walnut, Victorian hand-carved love seat in the front chapel room, purchased from one of the Fayette County antique shows. Morrow said he had never seen another like it and one woman told him the only other one she had seen was the love seat which had been in Abraham Lincoln's bedroom at the White House.

Morrow, who admits to being an antique lover and chandelier buff, said he would continue buying furniture and decorating items for the home. After working in the family business in Jeffersonville for the past 14 years and still obtaining items for the funeral home there, Morrow said he does not anticipate ever being finished with the renovation.

Original, solid brass hearse lamps, several pairs of casket lamps, one original kerosene lamp in a stairway niche, two chandeliers made in Italy, a pair of Kentucky rifles to be displayed on the lounge wall, a pewter chandelier in the Blue Room and several family prints and memorabilia will also be featured during the open house.

Morrow said they discovered several interesting aspects of the century-old building when beginning remodeling the interior and exterior of the structure.

All hardware was taken off the doors of the downstairs funeral home and the bronze locks with iron parts, dating back between 1845 and 1860, were refinished to their original lustre.

Morrow said when the tons of wallpaping was stripped from the old walls of the home, he found that all the walls were either solid brick or concrete and the wiring had been set in the walls so that no wiring was exposed.

The cherry and walnut wood stairway and old Victorian rug in the front rooms (at least 20 years old) remain intact. Morrow said he also discovered a fireplace had been plastered over in a front chapel room. "That is number 999 of the things we want to do," he said of opening the fireplace, "and we're only on 300."

Morrow added that workmen attempting to sandblast the exterior walls of the home in hopes of restoring it to the original brick appearance found the brick would crumble under the pressure of the tools because the old oil paint used years ago had penetrated through the brick. The owners had to be content with repainting the outside an avocado green with white bordering. White shutters are planned to be added in the future.

Five additions have been added to the original structure since being built in the 1800s so Morrow believes there is adequate room for expansion.

The front rooms will be used for chapels, a casket selection room, burial vault viewing and office with the lounge, garment selection room, storage and preparation facility in the rear. During the open house this weekend, Morrow said various salesmen connected with the funeral home will be on hand to explain and answer questions concerning costs and materials involved in funeral services and the two owners will informally guide residents through the funeral home.

The first Zeppelin flight was in 1900 by Germany's Count Ferdinand von Zeppelin. He flew the first of his long series of rigid-frame airships, which attained a speed of 18 miles per hour and got 3½ miles before its steering gear failed, on July 2, 1900.

THE BLUE ROOM — Featured during the open house of the new Morrow-Huffman Funeral Home at 415 E. Court St. will be the Blue Room chapel room in the front of the building. A Williamsburg mural commemorating the American Bicentennial lines one side of the wall behind an old Duncan Phyfe reproduction love seat, which has been handed down through the Morrow family. A delft and pewter chandelier hangs in the foreground dominating the room.

Leesburg youth drowns while wading in creek

EAST MONROE — A 14-year-old Leesburg area boy drowned Wednesday afternoon in Lees Creek, just south of East Monroe, according to Highland County sheriff's deputies.

The body of Tex Held Bondurant, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chatman Bondurant, Rt. 2, Leesburg, was recovered about 5 p.m. Wednesday, sheriff's deputies said.

Deputies reported the youth was wading in the creek with four friends at 2:30 p.m. Wednesday when he apparently slipped and fell into a deeper part of the creek.

Officers said neither Bondurant nor his friends could swim.

Officers from the Leesburg and Greenfield police departments assisted Highland County sheriff's deputies in the search for the body.

Washington C.H. firemen John Rockhold and Cecil D. Seaman were summoned to the scene for scuba diving operations.

Born in Highland County, the youth was a student at Fairfield School in Leesburg.

Besides his parents, he is survived by a twin brother, Rex, at home, and five sisters, Sara Ann, at home, Mrs. Delbert Queen and Mrs. Becky Caldwell, both of Washington C.H., and Mrs. Betty Sweeney and Mrs. Marilyn Taylor, both of Greenfield.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday in the Prater Funeral Home, Leesburg, with the Rev. A.T. Adams officiating. Burial will be in Pleasant Hill Cemetery, Leesburg.

Friends may call at the funeral home after 2 p.m. Friday.

Two variances granted by city zoning board

Two variances were granted and one denied by members of the Washington C.H. City Zoning Board of Appeals at their regular monthly meeting Wednesday night in the City Office Building.

Ruth Matney, 904 S. Fayette St., was granted a variance to establish a ceramics gift shop at her S. Fayette Street residence.

The zoning board, which also granted the applicant permission to erect a one-square foot sign, said the shop is to be used for sales only. No instruction sessions will be permitted.

A variance was granted to the First Christian Church, 232 N. North St., to erect a lighted, enclosed bulletin board-type sign on the Temple Street side of the church property. Milbourne L. (Pete) Flee represented the church in requesting the establishment of the bulletin board.

The zoning board members denied granting a variance to Thelma E. Barnett, 708 Peabody Ave., for placing a mobile home on the rear of the lot on Peabody Avenue.

Senate-backed 'sunshine' law would open meetings

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The oft-divided Senate has given bipartisan support to a "sunshine law" designed to open the closed doors of government meetings to public scrutiny.

Ironically, the open meetings bill came to the Senate floor on a day when crucial decisions about the state budget and gubernatorial appointments were made at strictly-private political caucuses.

The measure was approved 29-13 Wednesday without debate and sent to the House for further consideration.

"The fact is, the public business is being done in secret in Ohio," Sen. Robert D. Freeman, D-29 Canton said in asking support for his bill. "The purpose of the sunshine bill is to afford the public the maximum opportunity...to observe and participate in the conduct of public business." The sunshine nickname comes from a similar law passed by the Florida legislature.

The legislation would repeal a section in current law that permits public bodies to hold closed sessions. It would further provide that action taken at secret meetings is invalid.

However, political party caucuses are among seven carefully outlined exceptions to the open door policy.

Executive sessions would also be permitted for: public employee personnel actions, purchase and sale of public property, conferences with an attorney, labor negotiations, matters held confidential by federal order and discussion of security arrangements.

A section in current law allowing private parole board meetings would also be retained.

Freeman said he would have preferred to open up caucuses and real estate transactions, but was satisfied with the measure as amended by the Democratic-controlled Judiciary Committee.

Asst. Majority Leader Morris Jackson, D-21 Cleveland, said he voted against it because: "There are some who say that some things should be private and I agree with that."

Jackson said he feared the legislation could restrict informal business discussions among "three or four people."

Also voting no were Sens. Anthony O. Calabrese, D-22 Cleveland, and Robert T. Secrest, D-20 Cambridge.

Freeman's plan defines public bodies as "state and local decision-making entities," and describes meetings as "prearranged discussion of public business by a majority of the members of a public body." That would affect everyone from the legislature down to local school boards.

Citizens could seek a court injunction to open up meetings. Officials who willfully violated a court order would be subject to removal from office and misdemeanor charges, punishable by up to 90 days imprisonment and a $750 fine. Current law provides no criminal penalties.

Majority Democrats caucused for more than an hour Wednesday following the floor session.

Three persons fined by judge

Three persons were fined while another forfeited bond Wednesday on non-traffic charges before acting Municipal Court Judge John P. Case.

Clyde Winkle, 66, of 703 Sycamore St., was fined $100 and sentenced to 10 days in jail after he was found guilty of assault, filed on a private warrant.

Carl Henderson, 22, Lyndon, received a suspended 30-day jail term provided he maintain one year of good behavior when he was found guilty of making menacing threats. Judge Case fined Henderson $50 on the charge.

George I. Gregory, 42, Jamestown, was fined $50 after he pleaded no contest to a charge of disorderly conduct by intoxication and Harry L. Riley, 82, Octa, forfeited $100 bond for failure to appear on a charge of disorderly conduct by intoxication.

Traffic Court

A Jeffersonville man was fined in Washington C.H. Municipal Court Wednesday by acting Judge John P. Case on a charge of operating a vehicle with an insecure load.

Sheridan R. Smith, 19, pleaded guilty to the charge and was fined $50. A 30-day jail sentence was suspended pending one year of good conduct.

Steven C. Fenton, 20, of 1274 Dayton Ave., forfeited $25 for speeding when he failed to appear in court on the traffic charge.

Grain-debris export blend investigated

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department officials are among the first witnesses as the Senate opens its investigation of alleged corruption in the foreign grain trade amid allegations that exported wheat and other commodities are being mixed with dirt and debris.

The Senate subcommittee on foreign agriculture policy joins at least four other investigations looking into the foreign commodity trade, focusing on alleged bribery among federally licensed inspectors. Some of these inspectors allegedly have approved the shipment of low-quality grain from U.S. ports.

Under Secretary of Agriculture J. Phil Campbell was expected to testify today about inspection procedures on the docks and about Agriculture Department attempts to solve the problems that have led to complaints from overseas buyers of U.S. grain.

Campbell substituted for Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz, who is in South America this week.

Ruppert acquittal motion overruled

HAMILTON, Ohio (AP) — Prosecutor John Holcomb has survived a crucial test of his theory that James Ruppert murdered 11 members of his family in order to become the sole heir of an estate worth over $300,000.

Minutes after the prosecution rested its case Tuesday, a three-judge Butler County panel overruled a defense motion that Ruppert be acquitted of aggravated murder charges that he killed his mother, brother, sister-in-law, and eight nieces and nephews at an Easter Sunday gathering.

"The court, after considering the evidence, unanimously finds that the evidence is sufficient to sustain a conviction on each of the charges contained in the indictment," Judge Fred B. Cramer said in announcing the decision.

A spokesman for the subcommittee said the panel was primarily concerned with determining how extensive the problems are, although it would look into grading standards used to classify the grains and the manner in which the commodities are handled on the docks.

"Are there a few bad apples in the barrel or is the barrel so rotten that it contaminates all the apples that get in?" he asked.

The Departments of Justice and Agriculture, the Internal Revenue Service and one other Senate subcommittee are investigating the handling of grain as it moves from the farm belt to cargo ships.

The probe began in New Orleans, the nation's biggest grain shipping port. There have been 15 indictments in New Orleans and five in Houston as a result of various federal investigations.

Butz said in a recent interview that the Agriculture Department was looking into several options to improve inspections, including a federal takeover that could add 3,000 jobs to the federal payroll. Federal law now prohibits the federal inspection of grain but requires licensing by the department of the grain inspectors.

The inspectors are hired by private firms, boards of trade or state agencies to approve or disapprove the grain shipped from U.S. ports and to inspect the shipping facilities, including cargo holds.

A six-man delegation from the Federation of European Feed Compounders recently confirmed charges that broken corn, cheaper grains, dust, dirt and trash are added to export shipments.

A federation spokesman said that unless the quality of the grain and soybean meal is improved, European buyers may be forced to look elsewhere for the commodities.

However, Harlan Ryan, chief grain inspector at the port of New Orleans, denied that dirt is intentionally added. He said foreign buyers can purchase any grade of grain and specify its cleanliness. Most purchase lower grades because they're cheaper, he said.

Solar energy proposed for Xenia school

XENIA, Ohio (AP) — Solar energy may be used to help heat and cool the proposed new Xenia High School.

The Xenia School Board has authorized a project team from the University of Dayton's Research Institute to incorporate solar energy into the school's architectural plan.

Project Leader Dale H. Whitford said the major problem in getting solar energy to work in conjunction with a regular heating system was one of money.

He estimated the cost at $800,000.

"We're not sure yet about a source of funds," Whitford said. "We've been talking to state officials. It takes time to get money."

Whitford said incorporation of solar energy into the building plans cannot cost the school district any money or delay construction costs.

School Board President Walter G. Sellers said solar energy could result in a 70 per cent savings in heating the school.

The school will replace the one destroyed a year ago last April by a tornado. It is scheduled for completion in the 1975-76 school year. High school students have been attending classes outside Xenia.

The only special design requirements of solar heating, Whitford said, are adequate solar panel exposure to the south and "very good insulation."

Nationwide rail strike threatened

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Ford administration says "everything must be done" to prevent a nationwide railroad strike threatened to begin at midnight Sunday.

The administration called the prospect of a strike "a matter of deepest concern" after the Brotherhood of Railway and Airline Clerks announced Wednesday that contract talks were deadlocked and that strike preparations were under way.

But beyond further efforts by federal officials to mediate the dispute, there is little the administration can do. All legal delays have been exhausted and only enactment of emergency legislation by Congress could block the threatened walkout.

Union President C.L. Dennis blamed the impasse on railroad management and said "nothing in the picture at this time suggests we will be able to avert a strike." He scheduled a news conference for today to discuss his union's position.

Dennis earlier had rejected an agreement signed by seven other railway unions providing for wage and benefit increases totaling 40.7 per cent over three years. A union spokesman said the agreement failed to deal with special problems and needs of the railway clerks.

A 60-day cooling-off period imposed by President Ford under the Railway Labor Act expires at 12:01 a.m. Monday, and the clerks will be legally free to strike then.

It is expected that picket lines manned by the 117,000 clerks would be honored by most of the nation's 300,000 other railroad employees. Sources indicated the union may exempt bankrupt lines from the shutdown, including the Penn Central and Rock Island.

With the nation just beginning to recover from its worst recession since World War II, a strike could have crippling effects, particularly in industries such as steel and coal which are heavily dependent on the railroads, and farming areas.

"Everything must be done to prevent it, certainly at this particularly crucial period in our economy," declared W.J. Usery Jr., chief of the Federal Mediation Service and the President's top labor troubleshooter.

Usery was expected to step up efforts to resolve the dispute, keeping the talks going on an around-the-clock basis if necessary.

Following in his father's footsteps

BY MARK THELLMANN

In this day and age when it is no longer fashionable for a son to follow in his father's footsteps, it still happens occasionally - like last Friday when Gary Junk, son of Dr. and Mrs. D.R. Junk of the CCC-Highway-E, was awarded his doctor's degree in veterinary medicine.

"I guess it all started when I was a small boy," Gary reminisced. "I was always insisting Dad take me with him when he went on house calls and I never tired of watching him work at home with the smaller animals. As I grew older, he let me help more and more and I knew I wanted to be a veterinarian too."

As Gary grew up he found his own outlets for his love of animals. In 1966, the year he graduated from Miami Trace High School, he served as president of the Fayette County Junior Fair Board. He also worked with sheep, cattle, horses and hogs through 4-H. After high school graduation Gary enrolled at Ohio State University and was awarded a bachelors degree in animal science. He was then accepted in the college of veterinary medicine at Ohio State University and received his degree, making him a doctor of veterinary medicine, June 13.

Gary is married to Andrea Korody of New York City, whom he met at Ohio State and the couple resides at 4042 CCC-Highway-E.

Gary's future will be spent working with his father at their animal clinic on the CCC-Highway-E, but the two men will largely work independently of each other, taking turns with the large animal house calls and manning the small animal clinic. Dr. D.R. Junk plans on turning more and more of his clients Gary's way as time goes on. For the present, he admits there is easily enough work for both of them.

In preparation for the partnership with his son, the elder Dr. Junk, is expanding the facilities at the clinic to accommodate more animals and more modern equipment. The construction has already begun.

When asked why he chose the veterinarian route in life, Dr. D.R. Junk explained, "I was born and raised in this area on a livestock farm. My father also raised Belgium horses and always told me a vet would be a good thing to have in the family, so I obliged him and I've never regretted it, although it can be a very taxing profession at times."

Dr. D.R. Junk, who like Gary, is an Ohio State grad (1943), illustrated his statement by citing several occasions where he was called out on an emergency delivery in the middle of the night, only to return as the sun was coming up, every ounce of strength in his body drained from assisting a horse or a cow deliver their offspring.

"It's an exciting profession too," he went on, "you never know when an unusual species is going to pop up out of nowhere needing your help. Just last week when the Hoxie Brothers Circus was in town, I treated one of their elephants for an injured leg and last weekend I removed a tumor from someone's pet rabbit."

Gary has had his share of experience treating unusual animals also. Part of his degree training put him to work in a veterinary clinic at Ohio State, whose biggest client was the Columbus Zoo!

Thunderstorms cross Plains

By The Associated Press

Thunderstorms crackled across the Plains into the Midwest today while a slow-moving storm in the West swirled dust over parts of four states.

Eleven tornadoes dipped out of thunderclouds Wednesday from Oklahoma to Illinois. Four persons were injured in central Nebraska when a pickup truck was blown off the road. No other injuries were reported and damage was minor.

A tornado, unusual there, was sighted late Wednesday near Worland, Wyo. Hail also peppered southeastern Wyoming, and hailstones the size of tennis balls dropped onto the Oklahoma Panhandle community of Goodwell.

Intermittent and scattered heavy rains since Monday caused considerable farm flooding in sections of eastern Kansas and Nebraska. The National Weather Service said flood problems ranged from the foothills of the Rockies into the Missouri Valley.

Several hundred persons were forced out of their homes for much of Wednesday at Colby, Kan., when a normally dry creek bed filled with water after a downpour and flooded a four-block area. Three to 5 inches of rain soaked sections of northwest Kansas through Wednesday noon.

Travel advisories were in effect much of Wednesday for New Mexico and northeastern Arizona due to blowing dust. Clouds of dust rolled as far north as the eastern Colorado Plains and into the Texas Panhandle.

An airline pilot reported flying through dust at 10,000 feet over Amarillo, Tex.

Finance committee approves Athens osteopathic school

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Over formidable opposition from the Board of Regents, boosters of a proposed school of osteopathic medicine at Ohio University won a major victory in the legislature Wednesday night.

The Senate Finance Committee voted 7-1 to approve a bill, already passed by the House, to establish the facility in existing buildings on the Athens campus.

Regents Chancellor James A. Norton and other regents' officials asked the committee two weeks ago to forego action on the proposal this year, claiming it was not among the state's more pressing needs.

Rep. Thomas Fries, D-35 Dayton, said he was not disturbed that a $670,000 appropriation he asked for the school's "start up" was not included in the budget bill which received the legislature's approval earlier Wednesday.

Fries, an Ohio State graduate who also attended Bowling Green State University, said money can be found elsewhere to get the school under way. He said southeast Ohio is the most lacking of any portion of the state in health care, and this his bill "can help solve that problem."

Other sources mentioned by the Dayton Democrat included osteopaths themselves. He said the 1,200-member Ohio Osteopathic Association will assess members at the rate of $250 each to produce between $2.5 million and $3 million.

In addition, he mentioned a special Ohio University subsidy of $2.5 million that was contained in the budget bill to help the university meet decreasing enrollment problems.

Further, Fries said approval of his bill intact would authorize the state Controlling Board to release available funds, and that a possibility exists that the facility could get federal grants.

The only dissenter on the committee was Sen. William F. Bowen, D-9 Cincinnati, who indicated he was miffed because the same committee last week denied additional funds to the University of Cincinnati.

Sick benefits upped for public workers

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Senate has approved by identical 32-0 votes bills permitting public employees to use sick leave for personal reasons and authorizing hearings on individual accident and health insurance policies. Under a measure sponsored by Sen. Morris M. Jackson, D-21 Cleveland, public employees could take up to 32 hours of sick leave for religious holidays, birth of a child and college graduations and marriages of close relatives.

The Senate also endorsed legislation permitting the state insurance director to hold public rate hearings on individual policies and disapprove premium increases that he finds unreasonable.

The bill would also require hospital service authorities to file annual reports with the insurance department describing their transactions with accident and health insurers.

Both bills were sent to the House.

4-H Club roundup

BY JEANNIE ANDERSON
4-H Assistant

Horticultural exhibits are capturing more and more attention and space at county 4-H fairs across the country. And Americans' growing enthusiasm for indoor and outdoor gardening promises to keep the trend going.

Kids enrolled in 4-H garden flower projects may enter "specimen" classes or those in "floral arrangements". Many youngsters taking home economics projects also enter county fair exhibits with floral arrangements suitable for decorating dining and other rooms.

Whether kids like the more scientific "specimen" aspect of horticulture or the artistic "floral arrangement" side, they have opportunity to learn about and help others appreciate the role of plants in all our daily lives. 4-H leaders will help them make exhibits more educational for their fellow 4-H'ers and public viewers, as well as help them upgrade the quality of their entries.

Too often, young people and adults equate flower size with quality. And youngsters consequently select and enter overmature blooms which soon lose petals and drop because their stems can't hold the weight upright.

Also, many fair entries fall into "white" and "pink" classes simply because flowers aren't properly conditioned before they're put on display. For best quality exhibit flowers, harvest blooms eight or more hours before entry time, then trim some of the lower leaves before immersing stems into a deep container of warm water. A cut flower preservative, available at most flower, plant or garden shops, helps flowers remain in good show condition for several days.

4-H'ers entering floral arrangements in fair competition often lose points because their "arrangements" really are little more than bouquets - bunches of flowers haphazardly put together. An arrangement features a rather definite form, such as a triangle, crescent S-curve, round or oval outline. Learning to arrange a bouquet into an arrangement really isn't as difficult as you may think.

Start with "permanent" flowers - plastic or dried ones. Drying flowers might easily be a project by itself.

Permanent flowers minimize cost, avoid problems that perishable flowers create, and eliminate water spillage when you're working with several youngsters.

Cutting off too much of a flower's stem doesn't ruin a bloom's usefulness. Merely tape back the original stem with florist's tape, or to attach a heavy-gauge wire to the shortened stem.

Start with a simple, triangular arrangement to help beginners construct several types of arrangements.

When creating an arrangement that will be viewed from all sides, be sure to insert the vertical stem into center of the floral foam. The main vertical line should be about one-and-one-half to two-and-one-half times the containers width. Use the same formula in determining total width of an arrangement. Some designs may be taller than they are wide; others feature a low profile. Either can be esthetically pleasing.

Another stage in triangular arrangement is to establish a focal point or center of interest, with a large, and possible dark-colored, bloom, since our eyes naturally travel to the center of an arrangement and to a point near container's rim.

4-H'ers or you may apply these basic fundamentals to the construction of other, perhaps more interesting arrangements. Simple techniques and materials, helps youth have more meaningful experiences from working with flowers. Plus, it improves the quality of 4-H exhibits, which tend to stimulate other youth to try 4-H projects. Don't miss the 4 Horticultural exhibits at the Fayette County Fair this year. If you are interested in a 4-H flower gardening project, contact the county extension office at 335-1150.

Faisal's assassin beheaded

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — King Faisal's assassin confessed before he was beheaded that he killed his uncle to put an end to the rule of Islam in Saudi Arabia, the government radio reported today.

Prince Faisal Ibn Musaib, the late king's 27-year-old nephew, was executed at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday in the central square of the Saudi capital. His head was displayed briefly on a pole, then head and body were carried away for burial in an unmarked grave, in accordance with the tenets of Islam.

The broadcast today said he told his captors he wanted to end the influence of the state religion because it "was standing in the way of development in the country." But the broadcast said the nation will glorify the dead king by implementing the teachings of Islam and his plans with greater vigor.

The government radio announced two hours before the execution that a religious court had found the young prince guilty of shooting King Faisal on March 25 as he was receiving a Kuwaiti delegation during the feast of the birthday of the Prophet Mohammed. Public beheading is the sentence prescribed by Islamic law for murder.

The prince was calm as security men led him from a jail behind the government palace to the block in the center of Dira Square. An official of the court read the sentence to the prince and invoked "Heaven's mercy" for him. The young man's hands were tied behind his back, but he wore no blindfold. As he knelt, a security man prodded him in the side with a stick and his head jerked upward. The executioner, wearing a yellow robe, decapitated him with a single blow, and the crowd chanted "God is great" and "Justice is done."

The prince was the first member of the Saudi royal family ever executed in public. The only member of the family known to have witnessed the execution was Prince Salman, the governor of Riyadh and a brother of King Faisal.

Idaho citizens form posses

BY QUANE KENYON
Associated Press Writer
SANDPOINT, Idaho (AP) — Quasi-vigilante groups have sprung up in northern Idaho in response to the problems of sudden growth, a series of unsolved crimes and laws which members say will limit personal liberty.

"People always fear the unknown," says Robert Wilcox, sheriff of Bonner County, where one of the groups is active. "If they don't know what's going to happen, it strikes fear in their hearts and they visualize the worst."

The groups, calling themselves "posses comitatus," are most visible in Idaho's rural Kootenai and Bonner counties. The groups advocate various forms of ultraconservative, right-wing philosophy. Members say the federal and state governments are not following the U.S. Constitution.

The movement isn't entirely confined to Idaho. H. L. Beach, a 70-year-old retired postman from Portland, Ore., heads what he calls the Citizens Law Enforcement and Research Committee. Beach toured the Pacific Northwest organizing posse chapters. He said his goal was to have one in every county.

But an Associated Press survey indicated little activity in other areas of the country.

"Posse comitatus" loosely means "power of the county." Common law has it that a county sheriff may call upon any male between 18 and 45 if needs assistance. Anyone who refuses commits an offense.

Idaho posse groups say they interpret the U.S. Constitution as saying that if citizens don't like the way the law is being enforced, they can form their own posse. Some groups go so far as to say that if the sheriff isn't enforcing the law properly, they have a duty to do it themselves.

Such a philosophy is similar to that of the original members of the Ku Klux Klan in the South just after the Civil War.

Despite some lively sounding provisions in some of the posses' literature, such as the threat that offending officials should be hanged in the public square, Idaho's posses have gained little official recognition.

"We just recognize it as a social club, much the same as a duplicate bridge club," says Kootenai Sheriff Thor Fladwed, a big, broad-shouldered former FBI agent. "If they don't break any of the established laws or ordinances, we don't get to excited about them. Until there is some violation, we're not going to foster trouble."

Officials say they've received telephone threats, although the calls haven't been linked directly to the posse. None of the threats have been carried out.

Posse members decline direct interviews. "We've been had by you guys (newsmen) too often," said Jack Williams, a posse member from Priest River. "We'll give you a statement ... if you post a $1 million bond to guarantee it'll be printed exactly as we give it to you."

Most officials say the posses have been formed because the area has been beset by new problems. The population has grown rapidly in the past five years. There have been a series of violent, unsolved crimes. But most observers feel the main reason for the posses are proposed laws that members consider threats to their rights.

Goodrich Co. tries to sell L.A. facility

AKRON, Ohio (AP)—B.F. Goodrich Co. is trying to sell its nearly half-century-old tire plant near Los Angeles as a further step in shipping and production efficiency, the firm said today.

Gerard Alexander, Goodrich executive vice president, said the plant at Commerce, Calif., accounts for less than 10 per cent of the company's total domestic capacity for to produce tires for small trucks and passenger cars. He said it accounts for only 2 per cent of the firm's U.S. radial passenger tire capacity.

Alexander also said that more than 50 per cent of its production is shipped eastward, overlapping distribution of other Goodrich tire plants.

The executive said that in recent years, the firm has expanded or re-equipped its major tire plants at Fort Wayne, Ind.; Oaks, Pa.; Tuscaloosa, Ala.; and Miami, Okla. He also said that warehousing improvements completed recently will permit the firm to maintain service to automakers and dealers.

The plant built in 1927 contains about 20 acres of manufacturing space under roof on a 43-acre site, Alexander said. It employs 550 production workers and about 140 others. A spokesman said it was hoped that most would be retained by the plant's buyer.

Ladies are supersecs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — What is a supersec? According to Alice Marchak and Linda Hunter, she is a secretary to a superstar, with all hoopla and headaches the job implies.

The two ladies should know. Miss Marchak has worked 19 action-filled years as secretary to Marlon Brando, and Miss Hunter has also served with Brando and now functions internationally as secretary to Julie Andrews and Blake Edwards.

"But after all these years, I'm no longer just a secretary," said Miss Marchak.

"I take care of the house, I make all the arrangements for parties, I order Marlon's clothes, and because he has never had a publicist, I handle his press relations."

And much more. But she draws the line at trying to untangle Brando's personal life. That life is no longer as wild as it once was, she says, but she can recall the hectic times.

During his travels Brando was inclined to tell girls to "drop in some time," and sometimes they would be stacked up at his hilltop house like the holding pattern at Los Angeles International.

Misses Marchak and Hunter have recorded their more printable adventures in a new book, "The Supersecs," which proves that stars can be heroes and heroines to their secretaries.

"The question interviewers ask most is: What is Marlon really like?" Miss Marchak said in a recent interview.

"I am amazed that people still think of him in terms of 25 years ago — as the angry man with torn T-shirt and motorcycle. I try to explain that Marlon has matured since then. He does get angry sometimes, just as everyone does. But obviously I wouldn't stay with him for 19 years if he were the kind of eccentric that people think he is."

Miss Marchak, an elegant brunette, said the book originated with a movie script she had written. Brando read it, was "pleasantly surprised" and suggested rewriting.

Instead, she began writing of her real-life experiences and discussed them with Linda Hunter, who had once been hired as a traveling secretary for Brando. They decided to collaborate.

What was Brando's reaction to the book?

"He was completely supportive," said his secretary.

Initial jobless claims decline

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The number of persons receiving regular unemployment compensation from the state dropped for the eighth consecutive week, while special extended claims rose, the Ohio Bureau of Employment Services said today.

In the state, 204,500 persons were receiving unemployment insurance for more than one week as of June 14, the bureau said. That was a drop of some 4,000 persons from the previous week and compares to an average 66,879 in June 1974.

However, continued claims under a federal program for use when state compensation expires rose to 12,060 as of the week of June 14. In the previous week, 11,199 persons were given the extra 13-week compensation. A month ago, 8,327 persons received the federal funds.

Initial close rose slightly for the week ending June 14 with 20,527 applicants compared to 20,448 a week before.

Let's tour Ohio series

Those of you who have more than a passing interest in this country's Revolutionary War will enjoy this week's AAA suggested tour to the New Philadelphia and Tuscarawas County area.

(1) Schoenbrunn Village State Memorial, off US 250 business route and SR 259, 1 mile north of junction US 250. 190 acres on site of first village in Ohio founded by David Zeisberger in 1772. Here the Moravian missionaries built 60 log cabins, numerous teepees, and sheds and first church and schoolhouse west of Allegheny Mountains. In 1777, Schoenbrunn was abandoned because of hostility of British and unfriendly Indians. Zeisberger and his Indian converts razed the church to prevent it from being desecrated. Later, the entire village was destroyed. The church, schoolhouse, and log cabin dwellings have been rebuilt and furnished as in the original village. Admission charge. Museum and park open daily.

(2) Trumpet in The Land, 3 miles southwest off US business route. Historical drama held in outdoor amphitheatre. Re-tells efforts of Moravian missionary David Zeisberger to bring Christianity to local Indians; his struggle to establish Schoenbrunn. Shows 8:15 Tues. through Sun. and holidays.

(3) Zoar Village, SR 212, 3 miles southeast of intersection of I-77 and SR 212. Village of pietist sect settled in 1817. Craft demonstration and garden. Closed Mondays. Admission charge.

(4) Gnadenhutten Monument, 9-acre state historical memorial, mile south of city on site of original village. At Moravian mission here, more than 90 Christian Indians were massacred by white soldiers in 1782. Open daylight hours.

(5) Fort Laurens, near SR 121. Only Ohio fort during Revolutionary War. Contains multimedia theater with continuous showing of slide-sound program, "The American Revolution." Closed Mondays.

(6) Warther's, one-fourth mile east of I-77 (Dover-Sugar Creek exit), at rear of home of Ernest Warther at 331 Karl Ave. Interesting collection of his handcarved models of locomotives and collection of Indian relics. Admission charge. Open daily.

(7) McCook House, on the square. Partial restoration of home of "Fighting McCooks" of Civil War fame. Features a collection of Civil War material. Admission charge. Closed Mondays, Tuesdays.

(8) Morgan Raid Market, 12 miles east of Carrollton on SR 49. Designated northernmost point of Civil War battle, July 26, 1863.

(9) Petersburg Algonquin Steam Flowering Mill, located on SR 322, 4 miles south of Carrollton. Designated a National Registered Historic Place by the National Park Service.

(10) Custer Monument. State historic memorial on SR 646. Bronze statue of Lt. Col. George A. Custer, Cavalry officer in Civil War, Indian fighter. Custer was killed along with all his men fighting Indians at Little Big Horn in 1876. This monument marks his birthplace in 1839. An exhibit pavilion depicts the life of Custer through series of photographs and graphic materials. Picnicking area.

(11) Scio Pottery Company at Scio. Visitors can watch the making of all types of dinnerware as well as visit a museum which features animals and other wildlife. The "Sciorama" exhibit contains items manufactured by Scio Pottery Company through the years.

(12) Atwood Lake Lodge and Ski Area. I-77 to SR 212 and SR 542. Swimming, camping and other recreational activities available. In wintertime, snow machine, rental equipment, lighted slopes, lodge facilities and indoor pool.

(13) Devil's Den Park, between Ulrichsville and Newcomerstown. Take CR 10 out of Gnadenhutten and follow signs to park. This resort area contains caves, glen and overhanging rocks. 960-foot waterfalls, spring-fed for swimming, picnic area, camping sites and good hiking trails. AAA urges you to drive carefully and suggests this routing to the tour area: From: Washington C.H. go to Columbus and take the outerbelt I-270 east of Interstate I-70. Continue east on this route beyond Cambridge to Interstate I-77. Take this route north to the tour area.

Hearst rescue plan failed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Onetime underworld figure Mickey Cohen says he worked out a plan to return Patricia Hearst to her parents some months ago but it fell through because of fears for her safety.

"I had Patty Hearst ready to be delivered to her parents and to Jim McGinnis, who is the attorney for the Hearst family," Cohen told a news conference Wednesday.

Cohen said, however, that he gave up trying to capture Miss Hearst because it might have meant a shootout.

He said last fall that he had sources who located the newspaper heiress in Cleveland, but he said he had never seen her or spoken to her himself. "The place and destination for the delivery was all set," Cohen said Wednesday. "But it was just one of those things."

He made the comments at a news conference called to discuss his program to aid ex-convicts returning to society.

Miss Hearst, 21, is the daughter of Randolph A. Hearst, president and editor of the San Francisco Examiner.

She was kidnapped from her Berkeley apartment on Feb. 4, 1974, by members of a small terrorist group which called itself the Symbionese Liberation Army.

She later renounced her parents and said she had joined her captors. She is now being sought on a variety of state and federal charges, including kidnapping and bank robbery.

Rhodes seeks unified energy development

Appalachian governors want more active regional commission roles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The governors of 10 Appalachian states have told members of the Senate Public Works Committee they intend to play a more active role in programs of the Appalachian Regional Commission.

Governors of all but three of the states in the 10-year-old commission met for about an hour Wednesday with committee members in a closed-door session.

The meeting followed complaints by committee Chairman Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va., and other members that the governors did not seem to be attending meetings or playing an active role in programs.

Some governors and senators said after the session that most problems appear to be resolved. Both groups pledged support for continuation of the federal-state partnership created in 1965 to channel funds into hard-pressed areas of Appalachia.

Meanwhile, Randolph announced his committee will begin work next Tuesday on a bill to authorize $300 million for the commission for the fiscal year beginning July 1 and to extend its life through 1979.

The bill coasted through the House earlier this year, but seemed to be bogged down in the Senate — giving rise to fears by some governors that Randolph and others were holding the bill "hostage" until they heard from the governors.

Randolph denied the bill was being held up, but said he expects more active participation from the governors in the future.

Gov. Julian Carroll of Kentucky, state co-chairman of the commission, told reporters both the senators and the government want to retain the commission as a co-equal federal and state partnership.

He called Wednesday's session "historic," saying it was the first time as many as 10 governors had sat down with members of the committee to discuss Appalachian problems.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A unified plan to develop existing domestic oil and natural gas reserves for the Appalachian states was proposed Wednesday by Gov. James A. Rhodes of Ohio.

"We need to make use of our resources now," Rhodes told other governors and representatives of the states during a meeting of the Appalachian Regional Commission.

"We must move ahead now to develop new resources we know are available, or we will end up conserving ourselves into unindustrial wasteland," he said.

"We cannot afford the luxury of importing more than a third of our crude oil requirements, nor can we continue the crippling curtailments of natural gas to our industries which bring the misery of unemployment to hundreds of thousands of hard-working people through no fault of their own."

Rhodes offered a five-point plan, emphasizing more funding for development of shale formations, which according to federal estimates contain 500 trillion cubic feet of natural gas.

"I recommend funds be provided for at least 50 test drilling operations in the ten-state devonian shale area, along with additional research and development activities," the Republican governor said.

Rhodes described as a "token effort" three test wells being drilled by the Energy Research and Development

Administration and Columbia Gas Corp.

Rhodes also met briefly along with other chief executives with President Ford, Vice President Nelson Rockefeller, and Secretary of Commerce Rogers Morton, James Duerk, a Rhodes aide, said. Duerk said the Ohio governor had stressed energy and jobs in his presentation.

Rhodes also proposed quick development of known on-shore petroleum and natural gas reserves, immediate exploration and development of all offshore reserves on the Outer Continental Shelf, deregulation of the well-head price for crude oil and natural gas and the open use of the interstate pipelines.

Reds hold ground despite L.A. win

Bench's hit hurts Braves more than ump

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Johnny Bench hit an umpire, but it was nothing personal.

The Cincinnati catcher rattled a freak hit off Lee Weyer's shoe at third base and it hurt the Atlanta Braves more than the man in blue.

Two runs scored on the bizarre double in the third inning, leading the Reds to a 6-1 decision over the Braves Wednesday.

"It's just unbelievable," said Bench, thinking more about the RBI title than the ricochet his hit took into left field.

The two runs batted in gave Bench 57 for the season and the major league lead in that department. That means that Bench is in good shape to pull off a baseball oddity — four RBI titles.

Only Rogers Hornsby and Hank Aaron have done it and Bench — at 27 — says he has his sights set on it.

"I started off thinking it would even out after a while, but it hasn't so far," says Bench.

In the other National League games, the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Chicago Cubs 9-7; the San Francisco Giants routed the San Diego Padres 8-1; the Pittsburgh Pirates walloped the St. Louis Cardinals 9-3; the Montreal Expos nipped the New York Mets 7-6 in 10 innings and the Los Angeles Dodgers blanked the Houston Astros 4-0.

Bench's latest binge gave him 19 RBI in the last 14 games, propelling him to a wide lead over his National League challengers. Both teammate Tony Perez and Greg Luzinski of Philadelphia are tied for second in the RBI race with 44.

The Reds overcame steamy humidity and wore out Blue Moon Odom early for their 22nd victory in their last 29 games.

Phillies 9, Cubs 7

Reserve infielder Tommy Hutton, a .171 hitter, slammed a two-run pinch home run in the ninth inning to carry Philadelphia over Chicago. Dick Allen, who had homered and doubled twice earlier, got his fourth hit of the day, a single, with one out in the top of the ninth. Then Hutton was inserted for Mike Anderson and responded with a blast off reliever and loser Bob Locker, 0-1.

Giants 8, Padres 1

Derrel Thomas doubled and scored in a three-run first inning, belted a two-run single in the fourth and singled and scored in the sixth, leading San Francisco over San Diego.

Pirates 9, Cardinals 3

Pittsburgh scored four runs in the first inning and held on behind the six-hit pitching of Jim Rooker to defeat St. Louis. The Pirates backed Rooker with 17 hits, including two by Bill Robinson.

Expos 7, Mets 6

Nate Colbert led off the 10th inning with a double and scored on Pete Mackanin's single, giving Montreal its victory over New York.

Dodgers 4, Astros 0

Ron Cey slammed a first-inning grand slam home run and Burt Hooton hurled a three-hitter to lead Los Angeles past Houston. Cey's homer was his 10th of the season and second in as many games. It was the first grand slam of his career.

Orioles 13, Indians 6

Lee May, Tommy Davis and Paul Blair combined to bat in 10 runs as Baltimore pounded out 19 hits. May and Ken Singleton homered for the winners while Boog Powell and Buddy Bell had round-trippers for Cleveland.

Royals 13, Angels 0

Cookie Rojas' double scored Tony Solaita with the fourth run of the first inning as Kansas City belted starter Nolan Ryan and three other California hurlers. Ryan, who pitched the fourth no-hitter of his career June 1, was forced from the game in the third inning with a groin injury.

Nicklaus tees off on Grand Slam bid

MEDINAH, Ill. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus threw down the gauntlet to his 149 rivals as he prepared to tee off today in the opening round of the 75th U.S. Open Golf Championship.

"I am as ready as I can be," he said.

A loose air of confidence, tightened with a steel thread of determination, was evident as the world's premier tournament pro faced the second and perhaps the most rugged test in his bid for an unprecedented Grand Slam.

"I feel I am playing as well as I was playing in the Masters," Jack added, perhaps escalating the tension that has gripped old Medinah Country Club's No. 3 course because of recurring thunderstorms and tornado alerts.

In winning the Masters, Nicklaus gained the first leg on the four major championships which include the U.S. and British opens and the America PGA. No golfer has ever won the quadrangle in a single year and only one man, Ben Hogan, has won three.

"This is a very good course, I like it," Nicklaus said. "It reminds me much of the Scioto course in Columbus, Ohio, where I grew up, although the greens are slightly tighter."

Nicklaus acknowledges the recent heavy rains, which have a 30 per cent chance of spoiling today's opening round, have increased the number of players with a chance of winning the tournament.

"Wet greens would raise the number from four or five to about 30," he said. "But I am not sure that the greens won't dry out for the week-end."

Nicklaus is the 6-1 favorite. Chief threats are Lee Trevino, Johnny Miller and Tom Weiskopf, listed unofficially at around 8-1, and South Africa's Gary Player, defending champion Hale Irwin and Tom Watson, 10-1.

Wieskopf and Miller, like Nicklaus, are long hitters who fly a high trajectory to the greens. Under dry conditions, they would be figured to hold most of the greens where the line drive hitters, such as Trevino, probably would be scrambling from the fringes.

Trevino, who twice has beaten out Nicklaus for the U.S. Open and twice for the British Open, is rated one of the best maneuverers of the ball in the game. He would profit from slow greens.

Herron, Ashland gain success in Nationals

ASHLAND — Two-time Washington Country Club tournament winner Rob Herron said he's looking forward to playing in the club championships again this summer, and local linksters should beware, because the former Blue Lion star has been getting alot of spring practice in at Ashland College.

Herron helped lead his collegiate team to its greatest heights ever last week when it placed fourth in the NCAA Division III Golf Nationals at Fort Campbell, Kentucky.

The Eagles roared into second place with a 307-stroke total for four men the first day but slumped to fifth with a 315 the next time out. Ashland then rallied for a 306 on the final day to hop into fourth place.

College of Wooster shot a sizzling 298 the final day to win the championship with 907 total strokes, two fewer than runnerup Hampden-Sydney (Va.). Third was Trinity (Tex.) with 916 and then AC with 928. The other Ohio team placing high among the 16 invited clubs was Wittenberg University with 936.

Going into the nationals, the Eagles were counting on Herron and senior Kim Mansfield of Mansfield to pave the way for a high finish. Little did they know that the number-four man with an 81-stroke average, junior Jack Rendlesham of Lyndhurst, would be the star of the week for Ashland.

Rendlesham opened with an 80 to help shove AC into second place. Then his teammates found the second and third time around the course much more difficult. Rendlesham, in the meantime, fired a pair of 74s to finish with a three-day total of 228 for 13th in the medalist race among the 100-plus golfers.

Herron also finished in the top 25 with his 74-81-76—231. Then cam senior Terry Evans of Canton with 76-80-78—234. Mansfield with 77-80-78—235 and freshman Tym Smithett of Elyria with 84-84-78—246.

Coach Gary Praht said, "We are very proud to finish fourth in the national tournament. The kids were a bit disappointed in their play but there's nothing wrong with fourth in the nation. Rendlesham was a most pleasant surprise. He is consistently an 80 shooter but he played his finest collegiate golf ever in the nationals. I was also happy that the team bounced back from a poor day Thursday when five of them were 80 or higher."

The Eagles return three of the five men on the fourth-place team including Herron as they shoot for even higher accomplishments next spring.

Legion rally falls run short

BY MARK REA
Record-Herald Sports Writer
Post 25 nearly pulled off a come-from-behind victory over Hillsboro Post 129, but fell one run short as they lost, 5-4. The loss puts the Court House record at 5-6 for the season and 4-5 in the league.
Washington starter Jeff Green took the loss in going the first six and two-thirds innings. He gave up four runs on ten hits while striking out seven and walking three. Phil Roll, who pitched the remaining one and one-third innings, hurled no-hit baseball while striking out one.

Tyler Woods got the win for Hillsboro, pitching a fine game before exiting after five innings. He allowed only one run on five hits and walked none. Reliever John Kurp saved the victory for Woods, going the final four innings, giving up three runs on three hits while striking out three and walking four.

Post 129 got out of the blocks fast as they scored twice in the first inning. Dennis Wharton led off with a single and then stole second base. After two were out, Randy Binkley singled home Wharton and then stole second himself. Mike Taylor then singled Binkley home to make the score 2-0.
Hillsboro made it 4-0 in the third on a walk to Alan Wilkinson, a single by Jeff Conner, and RBI singles from Joe Kirshner and Tom Davis.
Post 25 finally got a run in the fourth inning. Mark Scherer singled and went to third on an error by the left fielder. Roll then promptly singled him home for Washington's initial run of the game.
Post 129 got its final run in the sixth on a double by Davis, a walk to Steve Adams, a single by Kurp, and a fielder's choice by Wharton. The game remained 5-1 until the eighth inning.
After one out, Alan Connor singled and came all the way home on an error by the first baseman. Roll then followed with a home run, a towering drive over the left-centerfield wall. Mark Fisher then reached on an error by the third baseman and, after Jeff DeWeese had singled, Fisher came home on Hillsboro's third error in the inning off of Jeff Craycraft's grounder to short.
Except for a walk to Randy Sparkman in the ninth, Post 25 went down in order to take the loss.
Post 25's next game will be Saturday against Waverly. On Sunday, they travel to Chillicothe for a doubleheader with Post 757.

Community Ed. plans activities

The Community Education Recreation Program will offer two programs this summer for sports-minded area residents.
Plans for a summer basketball league for post high school players will be discussed at a meeting Thursday night at the Middle School gymnasium.
Also, on the Community Education agenda this summer is a program that may interest local duffers.
Golf lessons will be offered covering grip, stance, swing and strategy. The fee for the six-lesson course is $6 and Community Education will provide everything but the clubs.
Those interested are asked to call Hank Shaffer at the Community Education Office by Monday.

Stamps In The News

Detente has also reached the field of philately.

To mark the Apollo-Soyuz linkup in space, the U.S. and the Soviet Union will issue a twin pair of postage stamps. These stamps, one of U.S. design and the other of Soviet design, will be issued on the day of the launches, now scheduled for July 15. The U.S. stamp will be a 10-cent while the Russian adhesive will be 12 kopecks.

The U.S. pair of stamps will have their first day of issue at the Kennedy Space Center, Florida, the day before the linkup of the two craft.

First-day cancellation requests should be addressed to "Apollo-Soyuz Stamps, Postmaster, Kennedy Space Center, Fla. 32815." The cost is 10 cents per stamp (20 cents for the pair), which will be affixed to the self-addressed envelopes. Remittance should be in money order, not cash or stamps.

Because of the size of the stamps, the return address should be written low and to the left. Orders must be postmarked no later than July 15.

Details on other possible cancellations associated with the space program will be announced by the U.S. Postal Service at a later date.

Cyprus commemorates three international events with the issuance of two new sets of stamps.

One set honors the centenary of the Universal Postal Union. Two stamps of identical design, but different denominations, feature the first mail coach in Cyprus and the UPU emblem.

The second set from Cyprus hails two anniversaries — the 25th birthday of the Council of Europe and the eighth European Meeting of the International Society for the Rehabilitation of Disabled Persons. The flag of the Council of Europe appears on the first stamp and the international emblem of the disabled persons organization is seen on the other.

West Germany has issued four commemorative stamps honoring people, places and events, according to the World Wide Philatelic Agency.

The first stamp pays tribute to the 100th anniversary of the death of poet and author Eduard Morike. The second celebrates the 1,000th anniversary of the Mainz Cathedral. A side view of the north side of the cathedral is depicted. The third release recalls the 500th anniversary of the Siege of Neuss. The fourth adhesive marks the fifth centenary of the "Land-shut Wedding" as a tribute to the marriage of the last Duke of Landshut to the daughter of a Polish King.

This quartet of stamps is available at your local stamp dealer.

Igor Sikorsky's historic helicopter flight of May 31, 1940, is honored by the 27th Milestone of Flight Cover, latest in the continuing series sponsored by the National Air and Space Museum of the Smithsonian Institution. The milestone of the first free flight of a single-rotor helicopter occurred at Stratford, Conn. It took Sikorsky 31 years of experimentation before the successful helicopter flight.

The price of this specially cacheted Sikorsky cover is $1. It can be ordered from: Milestones of Flight, National Air and Space Museum, Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D.C. 20560. If a large self-adressed envelope is enclosed for return of the cover, your order will be processed faster.

PHOSPHORS 'TELL ON' POLLUTED AIR

TOWANDA, Pa. (AP) — Tiny specks of red, yellow, blue and green phosphors, produced here by GTE Sylvania Inc. and invisible to the naked eye, are helping California scientists accurately trace patterns of industrial and automotive air pollution.

Concentrating in the Los Angeles area, scientists recently discovered that polluted air can affect municipalities up to 60 miles away. In a pollution simulation test, the nontoxic phosphor particles were released simultaneously from four locations at smokestack and ground levels. After being borne aloft by wind currents, fallout patterns were determined by up to 80 monitoring stations. Since the phosphor particles have a precise grain size and color and do not exist naturally in nature, they can be readily identified under a microscope.

Preliminary tests have indicated that stationary sources might be responsible for a higher percentage of air pollution than is generally realized.

More muggy weather was expected in Ohio today.

The National Weather Service said today would be like Wednesday—hot with scattered thundershowers in the evening and night.

Temperatures are expected to be in the upper 80s and low 90s.

A high pressure area over the eastern seaboard is pumping hot and humid air into the lower Great Lakes region. In the meantime, high pressure in Canada is bringing cool air into the upper Great Lakes region.

In northern Michigan, temperatures were in the 50s this morning.

The weather service said some relief may be in store Friday for Ohio.

Mostly fair and quite warm. Highs in the upper 80s to mid 90s. Lows in the upper 60s to mid 70s.

No animals hurt in zoo blaze

Fire Marshal Robert Homeyer said there had been a false alarm turned in at 5 p.m. The fire was discovered at 6:11 p.m.

No animals had to be moved, although the fire was near the Lion House, he said.

The building also contained stored plants and solvents.

To monitor calls

Senate questions Soviet capability

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Intelligence Committee plans to question FBI and CIA officials about Soviet capabilities to monitor long-distance phone calls within the United States, an informed source says.

Communist ability to intercept U.S. phone calls was first mentioned in the Rockefeller commission's report and later amplified by news accounts describing how long-distance phone calls were monitored and recorded by satellites and antennas atop the Soviet embassy in Washington.

The source, who described the Senate panel's intentions to investigate the reports, spoke in amplification of a remark made Wednesday by Chairman Frank Church that his committee would look into "the problem of penetration by the KGB and the necessary protection we need to invoke." The KGB is the Soviet spy agency.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch, in a news account from its Washington bureau, reported Wednesday that the Rockefeller report referred to monitoring long-distance telephone calls transmitted within the United States by microwave relays.

Quoting government sources, the Post-Dispatch said that although the report referred to "Communist countries," the Soviet Union was believed to be the only Communist nation with the ability to monitor such calls.

The Post-Dispatch said microwave stations about 20 to 25 miles apart transmit about 70 per cent of long-distance telephone calls in the United States. The remainder are transmitted by underground cables or telephone wires on poles.

To pick up calls between microwave stations, the intercepting antenna must be in the "line of sight" between the stations, the news account said.

Government sources said Russian agents could intercept long-distance calls with a high antenna on the roof of the Soviet embassy. Computers then would separate out the bundles of calls in each microwave relay, the Post-Dispatch said.

The roof of the Soviet Embassy, located about five blocks from the White House, is laden with a variety of antennas visible to pedestrians on the sidewalk below.

U.S. intelligence agencies are believed to perform similar monitoring functions in the Soviet Union, though that ability is hampered somewhat because the Soviets use less microwave transmissions, the Post-Dispatch said.

John D. Marks, a former State Department intelligence officer and co-author of a book critical of the CIA, said the Soviet embassy's antennae would have only a limited capacity to intercept microwave telephone calls. He said the Russians more likely use one or more space satellites to do most of the monitoring.

"If you just visualize the line of sight from one microwave tower to another, at some point it goes into outer space," Marks said. "You just put your satellite there, in a fixed position, and pick up the relays."
